Nazi Troops from Red Front Battle Yanks on Elbe

AMERICANS DRIVEN BACK TO RIVER AT MAGDEBURG

Gain Four Miles in Second Crossing Farther South

(Map on page 8)

PARIS, April 16 [Monday]—(AP)—Veteran German troops from the Russian front were thrown yesterday into the battle of the Elbe river 53 miles southwest of Berlin, where Lt. Gen. Simpson's United States 9th army smashed four miles east of the stream despite loss of one of its bridgeheads farther north.

The Germans smashed the original 2d armored [Hell on Wheels] division's bridgehead just south of Magdeburg. The enemy threw three divisions into the battle, one from the eastern front and at least one from the Berlin garrison.

Two of the German divisions struck out Saturday at the American infantry which had crossed the Elbe by boat. German tanks charged into the Americans, who were without armored protection, and the massed anti-aircraft guns of Berlin's outer defenses were swung down to ground level on the crossing. Heavy losses were inflicted on the Americans.

Some Yanks Swim Back.

"Some American troops that had pushed across the Elbe were of necessity cut off," one correspondent said, "and they staged a miniature Dunkerque to get back across the river, using boats, ducks [amphibious vehicles], and any type of craft available. Some of the men swam back."

The 9th army's 84th infantry division was hurrying up to join the battle, traveling 32 miles to within six miles of the Elbe.

The new push for Berlin opened from the 9th army's second Elbe bridgehead at Barby, 15 miles southeast of Magdeburg. The 83d infantry division there deepened its holding across the river to four miles.

[The German controled Scandinavian Telegraph bureau in Stockholm reported from Berlin that small American armored detachments had ranged from the Elbe "to the western suburbs of Berlin," but were forced to turn back. Stockholm also quoted a Berlin broadcast as saying that "several American armored columns" had crossed the Elbe west of Berlin and that the Americans controled the stream's west bank for 70 air line miles southward.]

Fan Out Near Seehausen.

The closest American forces to Berlin officially reported are those on the Elbe west bank northeast of Magdeburg and 45 miles west of Berlin.

The 5th armored division fanned out along a 12 mile stretch of the Elbe in the area of Seehausen, 50 miles north of Magdeburg. Infantry on the flanks reached the city of Salzwedel, 28 miles west of Seehausen, and cleared Bismarck, southeast of Seehausen. The city of Magdeburg is under assault and white flags flew in the city after an all night bombardment.

Southern Germany dangled from the rest of the reich by a slender thread. All north-south highways thru Germany were cut, and the enemy was fleeing southward over Czechoslovakia's winding roads and railways for a stand in the mountain fastnesses of Bavaria and Austria. The American 3d army was attempting to snap the thread by

Nazi General Sees War End in a Few Days

BY HENRY WALES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

HANNOVER, Germany, April 12 [Delayed] — Three German generals, including a brother of Field Marshal Ewald von Kleist, who were captured in Hannover by Maj. Gen. Alexander M. Bolling's 84th division, said today the war is over, with only allied entry into Berlin needed to make victory official. All voiced anxiety over Russia's aspirations in Germany, but professed complete confidence that Britain and the United States would present reasonable peace terms.

Lt. Gen. Adolf von Kleist, who was military governor of Warsaw until 1944, declined to discuss his brother, disgraced by Hitler, or to comment on the Fuehrer, fearing reprisals against his family.

He justified Field Marshal Kesselring's continuing doomed resistance because he gave an oath of allegiance to Hitler. Hindenburg and Ludendorff were entitled to surrender in World War I. because the kaiser's abdication relieved them of their oaths, he said.

Werewolves? Nonsense!

"I had difficult times with the Nazi leaders," said Von Kleist, "because they cannot understand how to treat persons of noble birth. I do not condone the July 20 attempt at assassination of Hitler. In a few days you will cross the Elbe and all will be over. I am extremely skeptical about the existence of any strategic reserve or new German units to put up a defense."

He dismissed the werewolf propaganda stories with a word: "Nonsense!"

"Every one in Germany is sick of war and realizes we have lost and further resistance is futile, but the people are forced to go on," he remarked.

Follows Von Papen

Regarding Germany's future, Von Kleist said: "The United States and Britain will occupy the west, Russia the east—that is all that can be said. I followed Franz von Papen, but I don't know whether he would again attempt leadership."

Gen. Lohning, commandant of Hannover, excused losing the city: "One cannot make a city into a fortress without sufficient troops. The Elbe is an obstacle as serious as the Rhine, and Kesselring may fight a delaying action there if he has time to rest his troops and reform. But the fuel shortage will prevent the use of tanks, even if he has many left, and ground the Luftwaffe."

"Redoubt" a Rumor

Regarding a Nazi last stand in a national redoubt, Lohning dismissed it as "pure rumor."

One general, who had been in Norway 18 months until recently, said, "I was amazed and shaken on my return to Germany to witness the terrible destruction by bombing. The war is over, but I cannot predict the exact date hostilities will formally cease. In fact, I don't know who could surrender on behalf of Germany.

"I don't believe the people will support or coöperate with resistance in a national redoubt, as they've had five and a half years of war, have suffered terrible losses, and have reached the limits of endurance."

BURMA FILM HELD UP BY BRITISH; TOO MUCH CREDIT GIVEN YANKS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LONDON, April 15—Release of a film depicting the Burma campaign has been postponed indefinitely by the British war office on the ground it gives too much credit to the American troops and too little to the British, the London Sunday Express said today.

The picture, made in Burma on orders of Adm. Louis Mountbatten, commander in southeast Asia, was directed by Col. Frank Capra, Hollywood director on military leave, and Lt. Col. Alexander Bryce of the British army film unit.

The Express said War Minister James Grigg "had a personal interest in the decision" to postpone the release of the film, the war office considering it gives an unbalanced picture of a campaign in which the ground forces are predominantly British." The war office told a Chicago Tribune correspondent it had "no comment" on the report.

MAYBE ALL THIS GERMAN WANTED WAS A DOUGHNUT

BY SEYMOUR KORMAN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

WITH THE U. S. 7TH ARMY IN BAVARIA, Germany, April 15 — A German soldier walked right into a group of five American Red Cross girls who operate the doughnut and coffee clubmobile with the 42d [Rainbow] division. As the girls backed away — for he was armed and they, of course, were not — the German waved his arms and shouted: "I surrender!"

Then he added the only other English phrases he knew: "Hurray, New York, Detroit, John L. Lewis!"

The five girls were wondering what to do when their army driver and helper, Pvt. Pete Skokas of Asbury Park, N. J., hurried over. Pete took the German to the Rainbow division's captive enclosure. The division showed its appreciation for the "assist" on the prisoner—and also for the doughnuts and coffee—by giving each of the girls the insiginia patch of red, yellow, and blue to wear.

Nazis Linger Over Cognac; Yanks Walk In

BY JOHN THOMPSON

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

THURINGIA, Germany, April 14 [Delayed]—A German general and his staff were in the midst of a farewell dinner Thursday night when Company K, 273d infantry regiment, 69th division, rolled into town and captured them. Staff bags were packed and trucks waited, but the officers were too busy drinking cognac and champagne to escape.

"We had a devil of a time keeping the officers from falling off our jeep hoods when we brought them to the town from their chateau," said the company commander, Capt. Albert E. Wilson of Montclair, N. J. "They were all drunk as hoot owls."

Chicagoans in Company

Among the soldiers of K company were Pvt. Harry Williams, La Porte, Ind., and Pvt. Thomas McCann, 7119 Lafayette av., Tech. Sgt. Emil M. Miskovic, 5124 S. Fairfield av., and Pvt. Kenneth Sellers, 342 W. 73d st., all of Chicago. Sellers is a former journalism student at the University of Illinois and was a copy boy in Chicago's Associated Press office.

Wilson and his men relieved a squad of 9th armored division soldiers who were guarding a huge prisoner of war inclosure which held 2,000 men. They included 76 German officers, 91 Hungarian officers, including a general, and 500 Hungarian soldiers.

Near-by was a house filled with Hungarian women and babies. They'd come along five weeks ago with their men, who had been working here in ordnance shops and on labor details. In hospitals were an estimated 800 German wounded.

"We found one Hungarian soldier aged 13," said Wilson, "and he'd already been in the army three years. What a war!"

Guns on Hospital Grounds

Hundreds of guns of all calibers were discovered in the town. Many stood under green camouflage in the town square. Many more were found in the grounds of a hospital, sharing the protection of Geneva's Red Cross to escape our bombers.

The German officers tried to keep the Hungarian officers from talking with a Hungarian born American photographer, and one Hungarian said almost tearfully, "Tell these Germans they can't push us around any more."

The Hungarians said they had come from Vienna, and had been marched here from Berlin. They were bitter about two things: The Hungarians could not get their hair cut by German barbers, and the German scorched earth policy destroyed countless Hungarian villages but ended once the German border was crossed.

The Hungarians said they had fled to the forest when the Germans tried to give them guns to fight with upon the approach of the American 1st army. When the Americans arrived, Hungarian wives, mothers, and sweethearts rushed out to the woods to tell their men they could come back safely and surrender.

This town also holds one of the Nazis' horrible political prisons, filled with more than 500 male and female scarecrows, including German, Dutch, French, and Belgian nationals, and two Britishers. Many of the inmates looked as if they would die at any moment. All were starving, and all told of being beaten almost daily.

LAST RITES HELD IN ROSE GARDEN HE CHOSE FOR HIS RESTING PLACE

Truman to Restore Prerogatives to Congress

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., April 15—President Truman, it was learned today, has definitely turned thumbs down on a continuation of the personal government and executive dictatorship that characterized Mr. Roosevelt's administration of the government.

A firm believer in the coördinate powers of the executive, legislative, and judicial branches of the government and in the checks and balances devised by the Constitution, Mr. Truman intends to conduct an administration in which congress will be restored to full exercise of its constitutional power. There is to be no more executive dictation of legislation, no more attempts to pack the Supreme court.

Addresses Nation Today

The Truman administration will begin full fledged operation tomorrow when the new President returns from the Roosevelt burial services at Hyde Park today. Mr. Truman will start off with an address to the country at a joint session of congress at 1 p. m. His speech will be broadcast to the country and to other nations.

The American people and the world at large will learn from this salutatory in a general way what views Mr. Truman holds and what policies he may be expected to pursue on the prosecution of the war, the making of the peace with our enemies, plans to preserve world peace henceforth and on economic and other domestic questions.

Tuesday morning Mr. Truman will hold his first press conference and that night he will broadcast an address to the members of American military forces at home and overseas.

New Dealers to Exit

The three days since Mr. Truman was catapulted into the Presidency by the death of Mr. Roosevelt have sufficed to convince the leading New Dealers that their days in the new administration are numbered. They have seen the writing on the wall and are making their plans accordingly. In fact, there are indications that there will be an exodus of the New Dealers belonging to the Roosevelt inner circle at no distant date.

Among the first expected to go are Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, Harry Hopkins, chief Roosevelt confidant, and David K. Niles, political manipulator and

JAMES ROOSEVELT ARRIVES FROM MANILA TOO LATE FOR RITES

New York, April 15 (AP)—Col. James Roosevelt of the marine corps, eldest son of Franklin D. Roosevelt, arrived at Floyd Bennett field today after a 10,000 mile flight from Manila, but was an hour and a half too late to attend the burial of his father at Hyde Park.

He went directly from the airport to Pennsylvania station, arriving there in time to meet the Presidential train aboard which his wife, mother, and President and Mrs. Truman were returning to Washington.

"I would have been here in time for father's funeral, had it not been for head winds," he said. "We left Manila when word of father's death was received and our flight took 60 hours."

Truman in Capital

Washington, D. C., April 15 (AP)—President Truman returned to Washington at 8:27 tonight from Hyde Park, N. Y., where he attended burial services for Franklin D. Roosevelt.

With Mrs. Truman and their daughter, Margaret, he was whisked to his Connecticut av. apartment. Mrs. Roosevelt and other members of the Roosevelt family returned to the White House.

During the trip from Hyde Park, Mr. Truman worked on the address he is to deliver tomorrow to congress—the first since his elevation to the Presidency.

The address will be made before a joint session of senate and house about 1 p. m. [noon Chicago time] tomorrow.

[W-G-N will be among the stations broadcasting the speech at noon, Chicago time.]

Artist Tells of Roosevelt's Last Minutes

New York, April 15 (AP)—The Russian born woman artist who was sketching Franklin D. Roosevelt when he was stricken fatally at Warm Springs, Ga., painted for the nation today a verbal picture of the late President's last living moments.

At her Locust Valley, Long Island, home, Mme. Elizabeth Schoumatoff, a tall, dark haired, brown eyed woman, told newsmen that Mr. Roosevelt was seated at the fireplace in the Little White House. In the room also were two cousins, Miss Laura Delano and Miss Margaret Suckley, and his secretary, William D. Hassett.

"The President was busily signing papers," Mme. Schoumatoff recalled. "There were papers stacked on the card table. The chairs were covered with papers as was a large sideboard. Then Mr. Hassett said: 'Don't mind me, I'm just drying my laundry.' At that the President burst into laughter."

Wearing School Tie

Hassett, she said, referred to the fact that the papers were spread around the room to allow the President's signature to dry.

"I had brought my easel with me for a life size portrait," Mme. Schoumatoff continued. "I was getting set to start painting when I noticed the President had worn his red Harvard necktie. It was just right. He never looked better than when he greeted me. He had on a dark gray suit and the Harvard necktie was a perfect blend with his blue navy cape."

Mme. Schoumatoff said one of the cousins who had stepped out of the room then returned.

"The time was 12:30 p. m. When it was getting near 1 o'clock the butler came in and started to set the table for luncheon. Mr. Hassett had taken all his papers away. The President looked up from the papers he had been working so hard over and said to me:

"'We've got just about 15 more minutes to work.'

Absorbed in Work

"With that he went back to work on the papers. He became so engrossed that he slipped slightly out of pose. His head went down a little but I didn't ask him to look up. He was extremely absorbed. Fifteen minutes had passed.

"I couldn't paint his face while he was out of pose so I was doing this and that, particularly making notes of the color and light on his face.

"Then he raised his left hand to his left temple, then to his forehead and his hand went back to the arm of the chair. Then slowly he lay back, reclined in the chair, slipped slightly to the left, with his head more to the left."

One of the cousins, she said, told her to ask a secret service man to call a doctor immediately.

"I went out and did that," she continued.

Mme. Schoumatoff said she did not again return to the room.

President, Cabinet, and Dignitaries of Nation Attend

BY WALTER TROHAN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Hyde Park, N. Y., April 15—In a rose garden under a wide, blue sky, Franklin Delano Roosevelt was buried this morning with simple, solemn rites on his family estate atop the Palisades of the majestic Hudson river.

Home where he longed to be was the 31st individual to become President of the United States as the sweetly mournful notes of taps sounded in the chill air.

Crowded about the hedged garden were the late chief executive's family, President Truman, members of the cabinet, major figures of the White House staff, senators, congressmen, distinguished guests, and old friends and neighbors.

Site Selected in Will

The grave was near the sundial which Mr. Roosevelt mentioned in his will in selecting the place for his final rest. Its shadows will mark the daylight hours in the years to come, which in turn will mark the length of the shadow he will cast on history.

The day was out of tune with the mournful duty before the saddened assemblage. The sun shone brightly and the sky was clear except for soft wisps of clouds. Everywhere trees and shrubs were budding the green of spring. Birds chirped gayly. An icy wind chilled the warmth of the sun.

Bombers Mass Overhead

Above and beyond the high budding hedge of the late President's two favorite trees were stretching toward the bombers and pursuit planes which massed overhead. One, a stately elm, stood in front of the rambling stone house in which Mr. Roosevelt was born 63 years ago. The other, a mighty oak, stood in front of the library he built as a gift to the nation.

On election night last November, as he awaited the fourth jubilant torchlight parade of his fellow townsmen, Mr. Roosevelt pointed to the elm and joyously recalled that as a boy he had hid in the branches for several hours, laughing with glee as he watched the frantic search of his parents and servants.

On a blistering holiday in late July, 1939, a few weeks before the outbreak of war in Europe, Mr. Roosevelt sat under the oak of mammoth girth and dedicated the library which became his memorial last Thursday on his death from cerebral hemorrhage in his second home at Warm Springs, Ga.

Casket Flag Draped

The body had been brought here overnight from Washington, where a state funeral was held yesterday in the East room of the White House. The cabinet, Supreme court, representatives of other lands, members of senate and house, and other high officials in public life accompanied it.

The casket, still covered by the flag it bore at the White House yesterday, was lifted from the rear car of the train by men in uniform. Slowly it was taken up the steep, twisting road leading from the river to the wooded slope at the rear of the Roosevelt estate.

It was exactly 10 a. m. when the first gun of a Presidential salute was fired by a battery in the library grounds to the east of the quarter acre garden. They boomed at solemnly space intervals.

Mound of Flowers Built

An honor guard lining the hemlock hedge around the garden stood at attention.

A mound of flowers, truckloads of them, had been built to the north of the grave. There were offerings from everywhere—from Gen. Eisenhower, from Cuba, from Bermuda—lilies, roses, carnations, and new blossoms of spring.

The beat of muffled drums in slow cadence rolled thru the wooded hills above the Hudson. In the distance, gradually drawing nearer, a band played a funeral dirge.

Promptly at 10:30, the national anthem sounded and, as the wheels of the caisson ground the gravel of the roadway, the notes of "Nearer, My God, to Thee" were played softly.

Behind the caisson, a Negro cavalryman led a black horse draped in black, carrying saber and boots symbolic of Mr. Roosevelt's position as head of the nation's military forces.

Widow Dry Eyed

At the grave, his widow, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, was dry eyed in her deep mourning. Her face was grief lined. Equally brave was the only Roosevelt daughter, Mrs. Anna Boettiger. Four daughters-in-law in black formed a back of composed grief.

Only one of the late President's four tall sons was at the rites. He was his second son, Brig. Gen. Elliott Roosevelt, who flew from London.

The rites at the grave were the customary burial services of the Episcopal church pronounced by the Rev. George Anthony, pastor of ivy clad St. James church in which Mr. Roosevelt was baptized and of which he was senior warden. The sonorous simplicity was in keeping with the dignity with which the family said farewell.

Almost on the scheduled stroke of 10:30 a. m., the flag draped coffin was taken from a hearse and headed toward the grave by eight non-commissioned officers representing the four military services—army, navy, marine, and coast guard.

A military band softly sounded "Lead Kindly Light" and then "Nearer My God to Thee." Somewhere among the mourners a child began sobbing.

Prayer Is Said.

As the mahogany, copper lined coffin was placed over the grave, the Rev. Mr. Anthony intoned an opening prayer. Then as earth was sprinkled on the burial chest, he intoned the lines:

"All that the Father giveth me shall come to me."

A lone plane circling above almost drowned his words as he declared that unto Almighty God "we commit his body to the ground; earth to earth, ashes to ashes, dust to dust."

There was a stirring in the crowd.

"Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord," the rector intoned.

"Lord, have mercy upon us. Christ, have mercy upon us. Lord, have mercy upon us."

The pastor repeated the words of the Lord's Prayer. Elliott's lips moved with him.

Near the conclusion, the Rev. Mr. Anthony recited the poem written by John Ellerton in 1870: "Now the laborer's task is o'er; now the battle day is past."

"Father, in Thy gracious keeping we now leave Thy servant sleeping," the rector continued.

The child's sobbing swelled into weeping.

Join in Lord's Prayer

At the Lord's prayer, many of the mourners joined with the minister. By the time of the final blessing the child's weeping rose to a pitch which chocked the throats of the mourners.

Few of these were dry eyed as the coffin was lowered. The family bowed deeper to avoid watching the sinking of the coffin. When the late President was at his last rest, a squad fired a last salute.

At each volley Fala, the President's black scottie, barked sharply. At his shrill yelps the reserve of many of the mourners gave way and before the echo of the barks died away, there were sobs and tears precipitated by the voice of Mr. Roosevelt's faithful, mute friend, welling over even rugged cheeks.

Head bowed, face wan but uncovered beneath her widow's veil, Mrs. Roosevelt seemed immobile until volleys fired over the grave caused her to start involuntarily.

At the close of the services, the sergeant heading the bearers folded and placed in Mrs. Roosevelt's hands the Stars and Stripes which had shrouded her husband's casket. She left the garden before the casket was lowered.

President Truman waited while the family filed out of the garden, almost midway between the house and library on the broad acres, which Mr. Roosevelt has deeded over to the United States after his family has left the old home.

Applaud New President

The family went into the sorrowed home. Mr. Truman headed for the funeral special, which had become the Presidential special the moment his predecessor's body started on its last journey. At the Hyde Park station, where Mr. Roosevelt had waved hello and farewell to fellow townsmen for 12 years, a warm burst of applause was given the new President as he stepped aboard for the return to the capital.

After the crowds had departed, and as workmen were returning the soil to the grave, Mrs. Roosevelt came thru the hedge and walked to the graveside. She gazed at her husband's final resting place a minute or so, then turned and walked away.

Mr. Truman went aboard the special shortly before 11 o'clock, but it did not leave until 11:53 a. m., because he waited for the Roosevelt family to return after the brief visit to the family home. A major reason for the return of the family to the capital is the serious illness of John, infant son of the Boettigers.

At the station, Henry Wallace, former Vice President, and now secretary of commerce, whom Mr. Truman displaced as Vice President, received an even greater round of applause than did the new President. Wallace, who was grief stricken at the cabinet notification of the death of his chief, returned the greeting with a smile, not as broad as his usual grin.

Lehman Applauded

Former Gov. Herbert Lehman also received warm applause from the people he once governed. Now almost forgotten in his comparatively obscure post as director of the united nations relief and rehabilitation, Lehman stepped to a car platform and waved a farewell to those who had applauded him.

Heading the cabinet delegation to Hyde Park was State Secretary Stettinius; leading the senatorial delegation was Majority Leader Barkley [D., Ky.]; at the head of the house group was Speaker Rayburn. All the members of the congressional delegation, which included Sen. Lucas [D., Ill.], came aboard a congressional special train.

HUNT FOR TWO MISSING AFTER CANOEING TRIP

The two young men were spending the week-end with Atwood's father, Carl E. Atwood, president of the Atwood Paper company, Chicago, in the Atwood summer home at Pier Cove on the lake shore. A dog, which accompanied the canoeists, appeared at the Atwood home soaked and shivering about 11 a. m. A search led to discovery of the empty canoe.

The Atwoods live at Auvergne lodge in River Forest. Lt. Krull is the son of Mrs. Eleanor Atwood Krull, 608 S. Kenilworth av., Oak Park. He is attached to a radar school at Miami, Fla. Both young men are grandsons of Charles E. Atwood, vice president of Irwin-Harrisons-Whitney, Inc., Chicago tea importers.

ISTRIA, TRIESTE WANT TO LEAVE ITALY, TITO SAYS

MOSCOW, April 15 (AP)—Marshal Tito, in an interview in Red Star today, declared the "population of Istria and Trieste desire to be part of Yugoslavia and we are assured that their wishes will be realized." Istria is a corner of pre-war Italy adjoining Yugoslavia. Trieste is a strategic port at the head of the Adriatic.

Tito said Italy "must make indemnity for the damage rendered our country by the Italian army, but up to the present nothing has been returned to us."

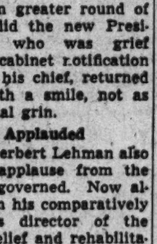
Red-Yugoslav Trade Pact

LONDON, April 16 [Monday]—(AP)—The Moscow radio announced late last night that the soviet union and Yugoslavia had signed an agreement for mutual delivery of goods. The countries will exchange supplies and materials needed for conduct of the war and for civilian purposes, Tass news agency said.

EXPERT VISIONS JET PROPULSION FOR ALL PLANES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., April 15—Hall L. Hibbard, vice president and chief engineer of the Lockheed Aircraft corporation, predicts in the April 15 issue of the magazine American Aviation that within eight or 10 years jet propulsion will be used on all new airplanes.



H. L. Hibbard

Hibbard, the engineer who built the jet propelled Lockheed P-80 Shooting Star—said to be the fastest and highest flying plane in the world—asserts every conventional fighter type plane is now obsolete.

Jet propulsion, he says, will make it possible for planes of the future to fly 100 miles above the earth.

Lone Soldier Stands Watch Over Grave of Roosevelt

Hyde Park, N. Y., April 15 (AP)—A lone military policeman with a rifle on his shoulder stood guard tonight at the grave of Franklin D. Roosevelt. Every two hours a fresh soldier would take up the vigil—walking slowly back and forth in the hedged-in garden.

WORLD SPANNED BY CHORUS OF PRAYER FOR F.D.R.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS]

Americans and friends of America paused yesterday to pay tribute to Franklin D. Roosevelt in globe girdling memorial services.

Radio and cable brought across the oceans the story of how his death touched leaders and common people alike in all except the enemy lands.

Millions of Britons at their regular church services joined in prayers for the late President, while American service men and women in the British Isles held special services at every post and base. The empire's formal memorial will be held Tuesday at St. Paul's cathedral.

De Gaulle at Mass

A solemn mass for the President at Notre Dame cathedral in Paris was attended by Gen. de Gaulle and most of his cabinet, while a half dozen other religious services were held elsewhere in the French capital. One of the most moving was that by the Paris Jewish colony at the Grand synogog.

In Rome, allied diplomats, church officials, and soldiers joined in evening services at the Catholic church of St. Susanna. Protestant services were held at the American Episcopal church. A huge crowd jammed San Bernardo square, standing in silence for 45 minutes during one memorial.

Many churches in Ireland observed a one minute period of silence in respect to Roosevelt's memory, and Derry cathedral at Belfast was the scene of a special service.

An open square in Algiers was thronged for services in charge of American military men and attended by representatives of the French government.

Greeks Do Honor

Greeks paid their tribute at a service in the Athens cathedral attended by the Greek regent, Archbishop Damaskinos, and other high officials.

Special services were held in Jerusalem and Tel Aviv.

A massed gathering of Indian civilians and British and American soldiers attended services in an open park at New Delhi.

Churches of Australia and New Zealand held special services, with ministers and laymen voicing tributes.

In Buenos Aires hundreds of Argentines and members of the North American community paid homage at the George Washington statue. On Tuesday, official religious services will be held in the Metropolitan cathedral.

'SENSIBLE' FOOD PLAN IS SOUGHT BY G. O. P. GROUP

Washington, D. C., April 15 (AP)—The Republican congressional food study committee, organized for this, the 79th congress, today announced its intention of "injecting some plain American common sense into the muddled and disorganized food situation."

Rep. Jenkins [R., Ohio] in a statement said the 44 man group would conduct an independent investigation and study of the whole food situation. He said one of the group's objectives will be "to help plan a sensible national food program based upon sound conservation and the fullest utilization of our resources—and not upon the New Deal theory of a regimented economy of scarcity."

3D SON RETURNS TO MOTHER WHO LOST 2 IN WAR

Pvt. James J. Lavin is to have a permanent army assignment within continental United States, to relieve mental hardships for his ill mother who lost her other sons in the war. But James first went to Germany to fight and came back with the Purple Heart received for wounds.

It was yesterday that the soldier, 18, came home to surprise his mother, Mrs. Nora Lavin, 856 W. 51st st., with the good news. It was in January that she petitioned the adjutant general to have her son retained in this country for his military duty, because she has a heart ailment, cannot work, and needs to have her son near her. At that time she was assured every step would be taken to stay an overseas assignment for him. But the next Mrs. Lavin heard from her son he was convalescing in an overseas hospital.

Martin T. Lavin, 23, an aerial radioman 3d class, was killed in action in January, 1944. Thomas F., 19, a seaman 1st class, has been reported missing since last October.

TRUMAN FACES 'LECTURE' FROM SECRET SERVICE

Washington D. C., April 15—(AP)—It won't be long before President Truman gets a good talking to by the secret service, experts in that line predicted today.

When Mr. Truman makes up his mind he wants to go somewhere, it takes more than arguments to stop him.

To the secret service agents, nothing is so disturbing as a President on the move. Their responsibility for his safety requires elaborate precautions to guard him at all times.

"It's going to be tough for me," President Truman confided to a reporter soon after his inauguration Thursday. "I can't get used to having whole swarms of people follow me wherever I go."

ARMY AND NAVY IN CHICAGO HOLD RITES FOR F. D. R.

Services at Great Lakes and Fort Sheridan

Memorial services for former President Roosevelt were conducted yesterday at army and navy establishments in the Chicago area with the particular formalities that are traditional in the services.

Aboard ships off the lake front, notably the training carriers Sable and Wolverine and the training gunboat Wilmette, the bugles blew church call and the boatswains passed the word: "Rig ship for church; all hands to church." The church pennant, which is the only banner permitted to fly above the national colors, was hoisted, as it is at church time every Sunday.

Services at Great Lakes

At Great Lakes Naval Training center the main service was held in Ross auditorium, where Vice Adm. A. S. Carpender and Capt. J. E. Johnson, senior chaplain, spoke to 2,500 sailors. The organist played Handel's "Largo" and the bluejackets' choir sang. Thirty smaller services were held in various units of the station.

The navy "had no stancher friend" than Mr. Roosevelt, said Adm. Carpender. "Always his plea was for an adequate navy, and he fought for it with determination."

Troops at Fort Sheridan marched to the parade ground and stood in formation while the post executive officer, Lt. Col. Fred M. Distelhorst, read the secretary of war's announcement of "the untimely death of our commander in chief."

Chaplain Says Prayer

An accompanying order by Gen. Marshall directed that memorial services be held at "all posts, camps, and station, war operations permitting."

Lt. Col. Arthur F. Ewert, post chaplain, spoke a prayer, saying: "Father in heaven, our leader has passed over and all the trumpets have sounded for him on the other side."

Many Chicago churches and temples held memorial services yesterday. Some of them also were open for a period of mburning at the hour of the funeral Saturday.

URGES WORLD 'PRESIDENCY' AS HONOR TO F. D. R.

Washington, D. C., April 15 (AP)—Comdr. Harold Stassen tonight suggested that the late President Roosevelt be named "president emeritus of the united nations of the world." Stassen, a delegate to the forthcoming San Francisco security conference, spoke on a broadcast program of tribute.

"He was looking toward San Francisco in his last days," said Stassen, a Republican who left the governorship of Minnesota to become a navy officer.

"Now he will not be there to open that historic conference. But the impetus that he gave it will be felt. The ranks will close. The agreements will be reached. And then we may well name Franklin Delano Roosevelt, in absentia, president emeritus of the united nations of the world."

BURGLARS GET $736 IN LOOT

Burglars stole 17 cartons of cigarets, 600 pennies, a traveling bag, a radio, jewelry, and clothing, a total loss of $736, from Elmer Wagner's home, 4652 Milwaukee av., Wagner reported to police Saturday.

A group of Chinese-Americans met yesterday to join with the nation in paying a final tribute to the memory of the late President, Franklin D. Roosevelt. They were members of the Chinese Christian Union church, 2301 Wentworth av.

In Chinese the Rev. Y. S. Tom intoned the words from Timothy, . . . "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith," in tribute to the late President.

Yesterday also was the day set aside by the International Missionary council as one of prayer for China and devout supplications for spiritual and material victories were offered.

VANDALS WRECK SYNAGOG; BALK F. D. R. SERVICES

New York, April 15 [Special].—Memorial services for President Roosevelt planned for yesterday morning in connection with regular Sabbath exercises at the synagog of the Hebrew Educational Alliance of Greenpoint were prevented by vandalism which made the synagog temporarily unusable, it was learned today.

Damage included the ripping of upholstery from benches, the tearing and scattering of prayer books and the smashing or removal of electric light bulbs. Several desks were rifled.

REPORT BULLITT WILL CONTINUE FRENCH SERVICE

Washington, D. C., April 15 [Special] — William C. Bullitt, former United States ambassador to Russia and France and now a major in the French army, apparently intends to remain in the French army service for the duration of the war, friends here said today.

Speculation that the ex-diplomat might return to the American governmental scene in the near future found no confirmation here. Before entering the French military service, Bullitt, an honorary citizen of several French towns, ascertained that he could do so without impairing his American citizenship.

Bullitt, running as a Democrat, was defeated for mayor of Philadelphia in 1943. He is now attached to the staff of the French Gen. De Lattre de Tassigny, who last week appointed him military governor of Baden-Baden, newly occupied by the French.

CHICAGO CHIEFS OF CIO PROMISE TO HELP TRUMAN

The executive council of the Chicago Industrial Union council, central body of the CIO in the Chicago area, yesterday wired President Truman that his pledge to secure a military victory and a just and lasting peace "fills us with great hope and renewed courage," and pledged to the President the wholehearted support of 200,000 CIO members in the Chicago area. The telegram was signed by Michael Mann, the council's executive secretary.

U. S.-Bridge Over Rhine Dedicated to Roosevelt

PARIS, April 15 (AP)—A 2,215 foot railroad bridge spanning the Rhine in the American 3d army sector was dedicated yesterday as the Franklin D. Roosevelt memorial bridge. The ceremonies were attended by Lt. Gen. Patton and Maj. Gen. Cecil R. Moore, chief engineer. The bridge was completed in nine days, 22 hours and 10 minutes. It includes 30 steel piers, 19 of which are set on pilings in the river.

TRUMAN SPURNS DICTATORSHIP BY EXECUTIVES

Congress Will Regain Its Prerogatives

member of the Roosevelt kitchen cabinet.

Morgenthau owed his first job in the New Deal and speedy elevation to the treasury portfolio not to proficiency in finance but to the fact that he was a friend and neighbor of Mr. Roosevelt. Morgenthau has been in eclipse for a year or more as a result of his ilifated scheme to deindustrialize Germany and reduce the country to an agricultural economy. Mr. Roosevelt espoused it and tried to sell it to Prime Minister Churchill at the Quebec conference. When it was demonstrated that suppression of nonmilitary German industry would ruin the economy of Europe, when German Propagandist Goebbels began to exploit the Morgenthau plan to incite Germans to fight to the last ditch, and when Morgenthau was charged with prolonging the war Mr. Roosevelt dropped the scheme like a hot potato. Recently Morgenthau appeared to have regained Mr. Roosevelt's support for his plan.

Successors Mentioned

Among the leading possibilities for appointment as Morgenthau's successor are Fred M. Vinson of Kentucky, recently appointed war mobilization director, and John W. Snyder, executive vice president of the First National Bank of St. Louis.

Atty. Gen. Biddle is slated for early departure and Secretary of the Interior Ickes will be retiring to his Maryland estate in the near future to write his memoirs. Secretary of Labor Perkins will depart as soon as Mr. Truman can find a successor, acceptable to the labor organizations.

Postmaster Gen. Walker will make way for a Truman selection, probably Robert Hannegan, chairman of the Democratic national committee. Hannegan, as St. Louis Democratic boss, compassed the election of Mr. Truman to the senate. Sen. Truman then got Hannegan appointed internal revenue commissioner and eventually chairman of the national committee. Then Hannegan deftly manipulated the nomination of Truman for Vice President.

Byrnes May Return

James F. Byrnes of South Carolina, who recently resigned as war mobilization director, is Mr. Truman's closest adviser and is likely to be secretary of state eventually. Mr. Stettinius, however, is to remain in the office until after the San Francisco conference.

Eventually there will be a redistribution of cabinet posts favoring the west and south. Mr. Roosevelt left a cabinet seven of the 10 members of which are from New York and Pennsylvania, three from the middle west.

The fate of Secretary of Commerce Wallace is in doubt. If he stays it will be because he is the darling of the PAC which Truman will try to drive in double harness with the conservative southern Democrats. But Wallace is far too radical to get along with Truman and besides the PAC is booming Wallace for the Democratic nomination for President in 1948.

Secretary of Agriculture Wickard is another cabinet member who will be packing his bags in due time. Secretary of War Stimson and Secretary of the Navy Forrestal are to be retained till after the war, tho Stimson because of advanced age may leave after V-E-day.

URGES 100 YEAR BAN ON GERMAN ENTRY INTO U. S.

New York, April 15 [Special]—Rep. Dickstein [D., N. Y.], chairman of the house committee on immigration and naturalization, today said he would introduce legislation in the near future designed to prevent entrance into the United States of nearly all Germans for the next 100 years. He made the proposal at the annual meeting of the organization for rehabilitation thru training council. The organization helps Jewish refugees and war victims by training them for new jobs. The only Germans he would permit to enter this country, Dickstein said, are those who have been the victims of Nazi persecution.

Yank Captures Namesake, Pole, Fighting with Nazis

"My folks came from his city, Warsaw, but I can't figure out if he might be a relative," the American Kozlowski said.

MOLOTOV SENT TO FOIL EDEN AT PARLEY, BELIEF

LONDON, April 15 (AP)—Russian concern over possible British domination of the world security conference following President Roosevelt's death was credited by some diplomats today as the chief reason why Marshal Stalin decided to send his right hand man, Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov, to San Francisco.

But it was believed the sudden soviet reversal of the earlier decision against Molotov's attendance generally strengthened reliance in the big three accord on plans for insuring peace.

Appeal Is Welcomed

The kremlin is believed to be convinced that world security depends upon a working agreement among the three major powers. To this factor was added the appeal of President Truman that Molotov come to the conference, an appeal which diplomatically could scarcely be disregarded.

Truman's appeal undoubtedly was welcomed in Moscow, if for no other reason that to give Russia's leaders a first-hand appraisal of the man who takes over where Roosevelt left off.

There were a number of problems on which the Russians and western allies were far from accord—chief among them the future of Poland, for which Roosevelt particularly insisted upon a coalition government.

Only Eden Familiar

It was considered that Roosevelt's death and the absence of a senior Russian statesman from San Francisco would leave Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden in the position of being the only one at the conference with complete knowledge of the big three's pattern for its future.

It was felt that Stalin, for the double purpose of aiding the new President and of underscoring Russia's points in the absence of first-hand arguments laid before Roosevelt, had decided to assign Molotov to make the soviet viewpoint clear.

100th Bombardment Unit Cited for Berlin Attacks

LONDON, April 15 (AP)—A distinguished unit citation was given today to the 100th bombardment group of the United States 8th air force for making the first three daylight attacks on Berlin in March 1944 despite snowstorms, withering flak, and savage fighter attacks. Only two groups of bombers reached Berlin on the first mission. On the second the 100th lost half its bombers, but two days later returned in a display of "extraordinary heroism and tenacity of purpose," the citation said.

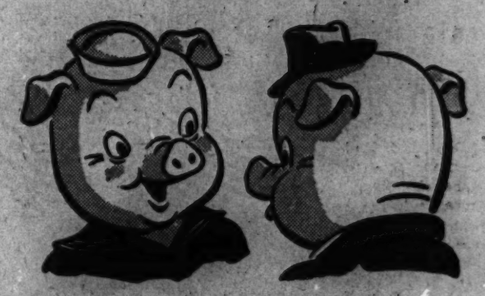
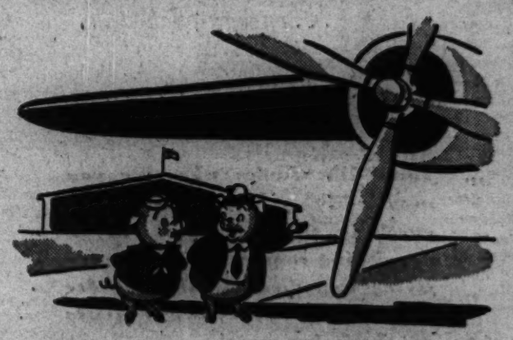
ALL THIS.. and EXTRA RED POINTS Too!



PORKY: You dope, why didn't you get into the Navy and see the world like me? In 3 weeks, I'll be served up in the South Pacific, ready to put the fight into one of our sailor boys!

FATTY: Okay, Bud, maybe I am going to pop up on a civilian's plate right here in the U.S.A., but when the fat that comes out of me in cooking is turned in by the lady to her butcher...look what happens.



FATTY: For example, the used fat Mrs. America is saving from chops like me helps make lubricants for bombers over Tokyo, and rocket bombs and parachutes. Our country needs tons and tons of used fat!

FATTY: Fats are also used to make the millions of bars of soap our fighting men need to help keep clean. Each man gets 15 bars a month. To make just 6 bars takes 1 pound of fats.

FATTY: For hundreds of other essentials, too...for fabrics, paints, civilian soaps, synthetic rubber and explosives our country needs used fats! Every drop should be saved; each pound turned in gives housewives 2 extra red points and 4 cents!

PORKY: Sure looks like the home front can have its chop and eat it too! This message has been approved by WFA and OPA and paid for by Industry.

We Must Save More Used Fats!

REDS 24 MILES FROM BERLIN, NAZIS REPORT

Russians Advance on Road to Munich

(Map on page 8)

LONDON, April 16 [Monday]—(AP)—German broadcasts said last night that Red army forces ripped new breaches in Berlin's outer defenses in a steadily-mounting battle of tanks, artillery, and infantry and were storming the approaches to Wriezen, 24 miles northeast of the German capital.

Berlin said that the full fury of a four-army Russian storm, against Berlin along a 170-mile front, had not yet burst but was likely to strike at any hour.

Moscow was silent on the attack which was expected to sweep west and link with American armies. Premier Stalin announced that soviet tanks rolling across Austria thru the Danube valley toward Hitler's hide-out at Berchtesgaden captured St. Poelten, strategic 10-way road and rail center 61 miles east of the big industrial city of Linz.

Mop Up in East Prussia

In East Prussia soviet troops virtually cleared the last enemy-held territory on the Samland peninsula west of Koenisberg, reducing the enemy pocket to about 88 square miles and pushing within 13 miles of the escape port of Pillau. More than 8,000 enemy troops were killed or captured in the mop-up battle in East Prussia, Moscow said.

Armin Shoenberg, German correspondent, in a late report from east of Berlin, said massed Red army tank and infantry forces were attacking the approaches of Wriezen in a "furious" attempt to break out of bridgeheads on the curving west bank of the Oder river.

Report Zhukov Recalled

By enemy account the battle was blazing along at least a 57 mile front with Marshal Gregory K. Zhukov's 1st White Russian army and Marshal Ivan S. Konev's 1st Ukrainians spearheading the assault. Berlin said that Zhukov himself had relinquished command to Gen. Vassily Sokolovsky, chief of staff under Konev, having been recalled to Moscow.

Some German broadcasters termed the Red army attacks "preparatory and of a local nature," while others described them as the "first chapter of the all-out Russian offensive toward Berlin and central Germany."

Capture of St. Poelten, 28 miles west of liberated Vienna, was effected by Marshal Feodor Tolbukhin's 3d Ukrainian army. Fall of the Traisen river stronghold carried soviet tanks, cavalry, and motorized infantry within 126 miles of Berchtesgaden and 86 miles from the frontier of the Nazis' Bavarian mountain redoubt.

Vienna Suburb Falls

Moscow announced capture of Floridsdorf, a suburban part of Vienna on the north bank of the Danube. Korneuburg, rail junction on the Vienna-Prague line three miles up the Danube, also was taken by Marshal Malinovsky's 2nd Ukrainian army. Stalin said that a number of German troops seeking to withdraw from Vienna were wiped out and 3,000 prisoners taken.

SEYSS INQUART ABANDONS LOOT, FLEES HOLLAND

Nazi Governor Leaves Liquor Behind

WITH CANADIAN FORCES OUTSIDE APPLEDOORN, Holland, April 15 [Reuters] — Dr. Arthur Seyss Inquar, Nazi governor of Holland, fled the country a week ago and has joined the rest of the Nazi leaders in their stronghold.

Arthur Seyss-Inquart

According to civilians Seyss Inquart passed thru the town last Sunday, after abandoning a convoy of loot he had planned to take to Germany.

A British major of a medical corps who was held prisoner in Appeldoorn and has now been freed by the advancing Canadians said he had seen Seyss Inquart leave the city.

Brings His Own Liquor

"He arrived here in the morning, leading a convoy of trucks loaded with loot—mostly liquor," he said, "then word came that the Canadians were rapidly cutting off the last escape routes, so Seyss Inquart jumped into his car and roared away in the nick of time."

The major added that after Seyss Inquart had left, the German troops, awaiting the coming of the Canadians, drank most of the liquor and even tried to sell him some. He accepted a few bottles and told the Germans "wait a few days and we'll discuss payment."

Henchman Is Wounded

WITH CANADIAN TROOPS IN HOLLAND, April 15 (AP)—A German Gen. Rauter, SS officer second in command of German forces in Holland under Arthur Seyss-Inquart, was reported today to have been wounded critically by the Dutch underground a month ago.

The reports said the Germans, in reprisal, killed 1,400 Dutch civilians and threatened to burn every structure between Apeldoorn and Arnheim if Rauter died.

Rauter was removed from St. Joseph's hospital in Apeldoorn two weeks ago because of allied threats in that direction, and his present whereabouts are unknown.

NAZI BUSINESS MEN ACT AS UNDERGROUND AGENTS, REDS CHARGE

MOSCOW, April 15 (AP)—The Communist party organ Pravda charged today the Nazis were using business men as underground agents over a large part of Europe. "This intrigue is going on in territory occupied by the American and English armies," Pravda said. "Leading German industrialists are remaining on the job with the purpose of establishing contact with the Americans and Englishmen."

Pravda said the business leader, Dr. Rudhard Duisberg, "sits in the consultative council of Frankfurt-on-the-Main," with W. C. Boehnert, a representative of the I. G. Farben-industrie chemical trust.

ALLIES CAPTURE KAISER SON AND GEN. MACKENSEN

(Picture on page 8)

LONDON, April 15 (AP)—The Luxembourg radio said tonight that the allies have captured Prince August Wilhelm, fourth son of the late kaiser, who at one time participated in Nazi activities as a member of the reichstag.

Absie, American broadcasting station in Europe, said 96 year old Field Marshal August von Mackensen, German commander of the eastern front in the First World war, also had been captured by the allies.

Prince August Wilhelm, known as "Auwi," was most active of all the Hohenzollern princes in the cause of the Nazis. Hitler honored him by giving him the title of reichsordner [national orator].

Wounded in 1914

Shot in the left arm during the battle of the Marne in 1914 and decorated with the iron cross, the Hohenzollern prince proved adept at giving the Nazi salute when Hitler rose to prominence. He became a brigadier general in the Nazi brown shirt army. He said God had sent Hitler to the German people.

[Prince August Wilhelm is fourth son of the late Kaiser Wilhelm. He was born at Potsdam in 1887 and had been married to Princess Alexandria Victoria of Schleswig Holstein. The allied radio said the prince was captured in the castle of Friedrichshof, near Kronberg, residence of his aunt, Countess Margarethe of Hesse.]

Mannfred Zapp Taken

United States 3d army troops have captured Mannfred Zapp, Nazi propaganda chieftain. Dr. Zapp, chief Nazi agent in the United States from 1936 to 1941, when he was ousted for failing to comply with the alien registration act, was seized at Bad Berka by troops of the 89th division, AP Correspondent Thoburn Wiant reported.

Zapp, formerly head of the Transocean news service, said he no longer was in contact with Nazi leaders and that he could give no clew as to Hitler's whereabouts. He claimed he had lost favor with top Nazis after being expelled from the United States.

In Bad Blankenburg, the 87th division found Gen. Vittorio Foschini, formerly Mussolini's minister of information for the Italian army, navy, and air branches; Foschini's wife, and Count Ettore Tolomei, former administrator of southern Tyrol. The Italians had been arrested early in 1944 by the gestapo, and now are under guard of American military police.

NAZIS FROM RED FRONT BATTLE YANKS ON ELBE

Magdeburg Bridgehead Lost to Americans

Two armored divisions of Lt. Gen. Patton's 3d army were driving eastward within possibly 85 miles of the Russian lines. [In Moscow, Red Star, the army newspaper, said allied forces were 93 miles apart].

Canadians on North Sea

On the northern end of the western front, the Canadian 1st army sealed off all Germans in western Holland with a 35 mile dash to the North sea northwest of Groningen. The Germans were fighting hard in Groningen where the Canadians reached the center of the city.

Farther south the Canadians were fighting in the center of Apeldoorn after crossing a canal. The strongholds of Zwolle and Meppel were cleared. To the east, Polish forces crossed the Ems river below Emden. The Canadian 4th armored division shoved ahead six miles and was nine miles from Oldenburg.

The 43d division of the British 2d army gained seven miles north of Cloppenburg and was about 14 miles south of Oldenburg. Scottish troops still were battling in Uelzen, southeast of Hamburg, where they were 22 miles from the Elbe.

[The Luxemburg radio said without other confirmation that the British had bolted northward from the Aller river bridgehead to a point 15 miles south of Hamburg, the federal communications commission reported.]

143,349 Prisoners in Ruhr

In the vanishing Ruhr pocket, the United States 1st army captured the industrial city of Wuppertal, with a pre-war population of 398,000; cut the pocket into two segments by joining up with the United States 9th army, and then all but crushed the eastern segment.

The Ruhr was cut by the junction of the 9th army's 79th infantry division and the 1st army's 8th infantry division which met at Wetter, on the Ruhr river eight miles south of the fallen arsenal city of Dortmund. This cut the Ruhr into two pockets, one on the west 15 miles deep and 30 miles wide and the one on the east 10 by 15 miles.

It had been estimated that 150,000 enemy soldiers were cut off in the Ruhr, but 143,349 prisoners already have been removed from the pocket and more were streaming into prisoner cages.

Lt. Gen. Hodges' United States 1st army closed up to the Mulde river on both sides of besieged and by-passed Leipzig after gains up to 18 miles. On the south, its 9th armored division reached the stream on a six mile front close to the 3d army's crossings and possibly 35 miles west of Dresden.

Fight House to House

North of Leipzig, the 3d armored divison reached the Mulde two miles southeast of Dessau, 54 miles southwest of Berlin, and was hurrying up tanks and troops on a broad front.

Between these two forces, the 104th infantry division fought house to house in Halle, a city of 220,000 population and an important manufacturing center for synthetic rubber, dyes, drugs and war chemicals.

Halle is the northwestern gateway to Leipzig, 16 miles to the southeast.

Twelve miles west of Leipzig infantry entered the often-bombed oil refinery town of Leuna.

The 4th armored division of Patton's 3d army was reported still battling a few miles west of Chemnitz, but German broadcasts asserted the 3d army was storming the city 33 miles west of the Nazis' big east front base of Dresden.

[The German controled Scandinavian Telegraph bureau reported that American advanced units had reached the suburbs of Dresden, capital of Saxony.]

The 3d army's 6th armored division crossed the Mulde river north of Chemnitz, apparently close to where the river was reached by the 1st army's 9th armored division.

The 90th infantry division of the 3d army battled five miles west of Hof, striving to cover the last 13 miles to the Czech border. The 90th captured Schlegel, five miles west of Hof.

Already the last good road between north and south Germany was severed and the 11th armored division captured the Wagnerian festival city of Bayreuth, first large locality to fall in the American drive into the mountain fortress of Bavaria.

Bayreuth, city of 37,000 population, was given a brief ordeal of fire before it was captured.

The Germans rejected an ultimatum to surrender, whereupon American guns opened up, fighter bombers dived down, and the Yanks charged into the city.

Push on Nuernberg in Strength

On the south Lt. Gen. Patch's United States 7th army was driving on Nuernberg in strength and was meeting only negligible resistance. Armor and infantry occupied Buch, 15 miles northwest of Nuernberg in the area where the 12th armored division was striking hard.

The 7th's 14th armored division smashed 32 miles east to Creussen, seven miles southeast of Bayreuth. It was 117 miles from Munich.

The 3d infantry division last was reported at Burk, 18 miles north of Nuernberg and the 45th was at Eggolsheim, 20 miles to the north. On the west bank, the 100th infantry division gained eight miles south and east of Heilbronn, where it ran into bitter resistance about 17 miles from Stuttgart.

The French 1st army, which on its front west of the 7th army covered one-third of the distance between Karlsruhe and the Swiss border in two days, drove 10 miles east of captured Kehl and seized Trenched.

French troops driving six miles south of Kehl, which is across the Rhine from Strasbourg, were about 60 miles from the Swiss border.

R. A. F. BOMBERS RAID BERLIN; YANKS SMASH MANY GERMAN PLANES

LONDON, April 16 [Monday]—(AP)—R. A. F. Mosquitos bombed Berlin last night in the second consecutive night of aerial assault to soften up the German capital. Saturday night the R. A. F. had sent more than 700 heavy bombers against Berlin and suburban Potsdam, where the German army has had its headquarters since the days of Frederick the Great.

Last night's raids followed day long pounding of the capital's approaches by the United States 9th air force. The American planes destroyed at least 64 German aircraft and knocked out hundreds of vehicles in attacks on air fields and rail targets.

One 9th air force plane was reported lost, while 17 German aircraft were shot down in aerial combat, at least 47 were destroyed on the ground, and 44 were damaged in attacks on air fields in the areas of Leipzig, Dessau and Marienburg. Thunderbolts bombed two fortified towns in the path of the United States 9th army, hit rail yards at Ulm and Gunzberg which were supplying German troops, and attacked concentrations of road and rail traffic in the areas of Chemnitz, Dresden, Muehlberg, Dessau, Leipzig, and Borna.

550,000 GERMANS SEIZED BY IKE'S ARMIES IN APRIL

(By Wireless to the New York Times and The Chicago Tribune)

PARIS, April 15—More than 550,000 prisoners—the equivalent of 50 German divisions—were captured by Gen. Eisenhower's armies in the first 14 days of April. Yesterday five allied armies counted 91,146 Germans thru their cages, a record for one day. Of this total the 9th army captured 49,690 of whom 20,000 were patients in military hospitals.

Lt. Gen. Hodges' 1st army leads all the other armies in the number of prisoners. Since June 6, last year, D-day, 519,311 prisoners have passed thru its cages. The 3d army has captured 447,068 since it was activated last Aug. 1, of whom 144,208 were captured east of the Rhine.

The 9th army has captured 212,990 east of the Rhine to boost its over-all total to 316,855.

TWO CASES OF WHISKY TAKEN

Chris Costa, owner of a tavern at 725 S. California av., told police yesterday burglars took $10 and two cases of whisky.

YANKS BATTLE 2 DAYS WITHOUT SLEEP AT RIVER

BY WES GALLAGHER

AT THE ELBE RIVER, April 15 (AP)—The United States 9th army fought its most furious battle in more than two months on the east bank of the Elbe as the German high command declared its intention of fighting for Berlin to the last, even at the expense of the Russian front.

A combination of German tenacity and long lines of communication has caused a gamble to go wrong and the slow movement of the 9th tactical air force to forward air fields resulted in a sharp setback late yesterday.

For the first time in its brilliant record of two and a half years of war, the 2d armored division had to give up territory to the enemy when it was forced to withdraw its bridgehead from the east bank of the Elbe river just south of Magdeburg.

Bridge Damaged by Guns

Two German divisions hit the 2d armored infantry yesterday morning.

The old "Hell on Wheels" division, which cracked the German front wide open with a dash from the Rhine to the Elbe, had its bridge damaged four times by German guns and was unable to send tanks over to support the infantry, which had crossed in boats 48 hours previously.

Doughboys of the 2d armored division's 41st regiment and the 30th division fought for two days without sleep and with little food before coming back across the Elbe with heavy casualties.

Of the two divisions thrown against the 2d armored, one was from Berlin's inner defenses, the 580th Potsdam division, and the other was from the eastern front. One other division has been identified.

Use Jet Fighter Planes

It is not immediately apparent where the German tanks that attacked came from. The Germans also used jet and fighter planes in continuous attacks.

Another factor contributing to the setback was the rapid 9th army dash to the Elbe, which left it without the power punch it possessed when it crossed the Rhine. Ammunition has to be brought several hundred miles by truck.

While tactical planes have been hampered by poor weather at their bases, the front itself has been marked by clear weather, particularly around Berlin, where German fighters now are based.

The problem of the 9th army now is one of bringing up the tail of the army, which includes supply, close to the front line troops for a new blow forward.

The gentlemen were glad the lady outguessed them!

"Phooey—that line's too long," said six men as they got set to make a return circuit of our revolving door. But our Directress of Service smilingly encouraged them to wait . . . bet them they'd have a table in 10 minutes. You should have seen them smile when their turn came in eight!

Now we're not foolish enough to claim that all our waiting lines melt away in eight minutes. Or even ten. We wish they did. Unfortunately, with a war to be won, we've no claim on extra materials for expansion, or extra people to serve you.

However, the lines do disappear with a speed which surprises even us. One reason is that guests seem to realize others are waiting and graciously pass up that extra cigarette and bit of conversation at the end of their meal.

Another is because every one in the organization cooperates wholeheartedly to serve you your food as promptly as possible. All of us really try to make a Stouffer meal a bright spot in your day. We do our best to make up for those long lines with the best food we can prepare, plus cheerful smiles and friendly service.

That's why we're so pleased when guests say, as did an irate gentleman who stomped out one night but returned the next, "From now on, I'll wait . . . a Stouffer dinner is worth it!"

FRENCH CAPTURE NAZI POCKET IN BORDEAUX DRIVE

Navy Flotilla and 1,300 Bombers Blast Area

BY DAVID DARRAH
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

PARIS, April 15—The Bay of Biscay and the forgotten Atlantic front far in the west echoed to the thunder of intense naval cannon fire and bombs dropped by 1,300 planes as the combined drive to knock the Germans out of the resistance pockets at the mouth of the Gironde river continued to gain today.

Under cover of American artillery support and heavy bombing operations by the 8th air force elements, French forces of the west under Gen. Eduard de Larminat, attacking with tanks and infantry captured Royan, and Gen. Larminat informed Adm. G. S. Rue, commanding the naval forces coöperating in the attack, that his troops were making good progress.

Nazi Admiral in Command

The Germans in the pocket at Point de Graves on the other side of the river are well armed and supplied, and are under the command of Adm. Michele of the German marines.

[An Associated Press dispatch from the front reported that bitter fighting continued on Point De Grave, where French losses were heavy. Seldom in this war has so much firepower been concentrated upon such a small area, the dispatch said. The French armor bypassed the strongly fortified town of Belmont, and the infantry attacking with bayonets cleared the town, it was reported.]

The aim of the operation, which is apparently being carried out on a big scale now that air and artillery elements are available to coöperate with the French Forces of the Interior [F. F. I.], is to clear the Gironde and open up the port of Bordeaux to shipping.

Bombers Dump Liquid Fire

Larminat said in orders of the day to his troops: "Bordeaux must be opened to shipping if the French are not to go hungry next winter."

In today's bombing Flying Fortresses and Liberators for the first time dropped tanks filled with 160 gallons of inflammable liquid on German positions, causing a huge fire.

Thousands of tons of high explosives also were dropped on the strong German gun positions on both sides of the Gironde estuary while naval guns from Adm. Rue's flotilla hurled shells all morning.

[The Associate Press reported from Paris that tactical air units made 1,200 sorties in which they destroyed 65 German planes and damaged 45 in the air and on the ground, while themselves losing three.]

No Surrender, Is Order

German prisoners taken by Gen. Larminat's men in the attacks on the fortress of Geffe, two miles north of Royan, said that Adm. Michele had ordered death for any one who surrendered.

The attack against the German pockets at the Gironde's mouth began yesterday morning with heavy bombing and artillery fire. At dawn this morning the F. F. I.s supported by American artillery launched their ground attack.

GERMAN YOUTHS NOW BACKBONE OF NAZI DEFENSE

BY HENRY WALES
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

MAGDEBURG, Germany, April 14 [Delayed] — The Nazi party is stronger in the area where Americans now are fighting than anywhere else in Germany. The area has a greater proportion of members and the strongest Hitler Youth organization.

This fact accounts for the civilians aiding the German army in defending the Elbe river crossings and resisting the advance to the east. It confirms the statement of Gen. Lohning, commandant of Hanover, interviewed after his capture yesterday, that Field Marshal Keselring may have had time to regroup and rest his troops after their fatiguing, harassed retreat and make a last stand at the Elbe.

Put in Crack Division

The familiar 116th panzer [armored] division, already oft times beaten by the Yanks, placed in several elements along the Elbe, supported by anti-aircraft artillery from a thick belt of guns forming the final defenses of Berlin against raids. Forty to 50 enemy tanks were observed in the area by American pilots.

Units from the panzer lehr [training] division also cropped up on this sector but the principal and bitterest opposition came from young cadet officers hastily assembled from numerous training quarters in this region. They are led by rabid elite guardsmen who hypnotized them into the belief Hitler is being a martyr to the fatherland and by the more material argument that their parents, brothers, and sisters will be executed if they violate their oath to the fuehrer.

Lectured on Obligation

With all the normal distractions the lads usually enjoyed deprived them—movies, theaters, games, girls, and even books—and leading a spartan barracks life, constantly lectured and instilled with the Nazi tenet, the 18 and 19 year olders' entire being is concentrated on the obligation they owe the Nazis and Hitler and the glorious, dramatic heroes they will become by making the supreme sacrifice for home and country.

Boyishly, they react exactly as normal lads of free countries, who dream of themselves as dashing cowboys or lusty gangsters or intrepid aviators.

CHARGES DUTCH NAZIS KILLED SIX 'CHUTING YANKS

WITH CANADIAN TROOPS IN HOLLAND, April 15 (AP)—Nazi Dutch SS [elite guard] troops shot and killed six members of a Flying Fortress crew as they parachuted from their burning plane near Apeldoorn, a British medical officer said today.

He said the pilot and two other wounded men had been brought in by Germans who said the pro-Nazi Dutch had deliberately shot them. The pilot, since transferred to another hospital near Rotterdam, told him that as the crew parachuted the Dutch SS troops fired on the descending men and killed six. Later he saw a Dutch trooper shoot another crewman after he reached the earth.

He said he had heard of similar cases but that invariably those doing the shooting were SS troops and not regular army men.

ARMY CENSOR PAYS FOR STORY OF NAZI GOLD

Bradley Request to Kill Dispatches Is Too Late

BY ROBERT CROMIE
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

WITH THE U. S. 3D ARMY, Germany, April 9 [Delayed]—The chief press censor of the 3d army has been transferred after authorizing correspondents to send out stories of the seizure of many millions in reichsbank assets two days ago.

There was no breach of security in releasing the fact that the billions in gold, currency, and art treasure were found in a salt mine a half mile underground, and such a story could not have given "aid and comfort" to the enemy, Capt. Cecil Durant of Gainesville, Fla., chief censor since the 3d army entered France last July, is said to have believed.

There is a general feeling among newsmen that if the story actually involved security, the army itself was at least equally at fault, as it knew of the discovery many hours before the first stories were filed but failed to ask the censors to withhold mention of it.

Fear Slow Up in Future

There is an uneasy feeling thruout the press camp that Durant's fate is likely to cause his successor to slow up the release of many stories in the future.

Altho the army has had two days to explain why security was involved censors here are still in the dark on the matter.

Shortly after the first stories were filed, there was an urgent request from Gen. Bradley, army group commander, that service notices be sent all officers to whom the stories were filed urging them to "kill" the dispatches. When it was pointed out that stories already had been sent to the United States via uncoded radio and undoubtedly already were in print, the request was rescinded.

Finally Permitted to Enter

The following day correspondents visiting the mine were halted at the gate by an armed guard but finally were permitted to enter.

Later press arrivals, however, were permitted only to reach the bottom of the shaft and not even allowed to peer thru the hole that had been blown into the treasure room. Later in the afternoon all photographs were ordered confiscated, and all stories sent to 3d army headquarters.

The stories were passed, however, with minor deletions, and the pictures returned to the photographers.

ALLIED GAINS END STALEMATE IN NORTH ITALY

Yanks Take Ridge in Costly Fight

BY CLAY GOWRAN
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

WITH THE U. S. 5TH ARMY IN ITALY, April 15—The long stalemated Italian front has come to life after a winter of little more than patrol activity, sporadic artillery shelling and small scale attacks.

There is small hope the new activity on the United States 5th and British 8th army fronts will result in an immediate break-thru and lightning advance across northern Italy such as that achieved on the western front. The battle for Italy will continue to be a slow, bloody offensive, at least until the 5th army is able to slug its way out of the difficult mountainous terrain of the Etruscan Apennines and get down into the flatlands of the Po valley.

Still Looking Northward

Last October we were trying to reach Bologna and today we still are looking northward toward that battered prize on the margin of the Po plain. But in between is a fortified zone equal in strength and depth to almost anything the allies ever tackled in Italy.

As was the Gothic line, this formidable new defensive zone is a job for infantry. Tanks are almost useless because of the mountainous terrain and planes can only harass it.

Even if Bologna were captured or by-passed, the going still would be tough. Not far north is the Po river, Italy's Rhine, and almost as difficult to cross. North of the Po are other rivers, most of them flowing across any line of advance. One, the Adige, is as well placed a defensive line as if dug by the Germans.

Objectives Gained

Nevertheless, the allies are on the way. The Negro 92d division and the 442d regiment of Japanese Americans have been making sizable gains on the west coast end of the line, and the polyglot troops of the British 8th army—English, Polish, New Zealanders, Indians, and Italians—have gained several strategic objectives.

American infantry southwest of Bologna jumped off yesterday. In some of the stiffest fighting they have ever experienced, they drove the Germans from two mile long Roffeno ridge and captured Rocca de Roffeno, a barren stone 2,889 foot mass from which the Germans looked down at the Americans.

Capture of Roffeno ridge was costly because the Germans had dug themselves in and mined approaches to their positions.

More than 325 Germans prisoners were captured during the day, however. They were not "bottom of the barrel" troops, but well conditioned fighting men. They reported heavy casualties as a result of a preliminary American air and artillery attack. The prisoners knew of President Roosevelt's death. The high command had sent messengers to various sections on the Italian front with the news and also broadcast it, apparently in the hope announcement of the death of one of the Big Three would bolster morale.

[Marshal Harold Alexander, allied commander, began the Po valley offensive convinced that the Nazis would not withdraw, the Associated Press said. Censorship today permitted transmission of his statement made April 4. He said even if the Nazis tried it would take so long to get out that they could reach no vital battlefront in time.]

UNDERGROUND ROCKET FACTORY CAPTURED, REDS IN VIENNA SAY

MOSCOW, April 15 (AP)—Dispatches from Vienna said today that the Red army had captured a huge German underground rocket factory where 200,000 Germans transferred from the reich manufactured the robot weapons. A large automobile factory also was captured.

Reports from the Austrian capital told of long lines of Viennese in front of food shops with the population of the country suffering from the pitifully low rations given the Austrians by the Germans.

In the famous Schoenbrunn palace there was evidence of wanton destruction by the retreating Germans, Russian correspondents said. In the apartment of Crown Prince Rudolf, son of Franz Josef, dirty shoes and clothing were strewn. In the rooms of Maria Theresa the bed of Franz Josef's daughter was filled with empty cans. The Germans ripped paintings from frames thruout the palace, and all of the finest furniture had been taken to Germany.

FIND NAZI JET PLANE FACTORY IN SALT MINE

[By Wireless to the New York News and The Chicago Tribune]

AGELN, Germany, April 15—An underground factory for Hitler's new jet propelled plane was captured near here today. Fifty-six fuselages were being turned out daily in a 1,000 foot deep salt mine but none had yet been placed in combat. More than 1,000 slave laborers were working around the clock to meet the projected schedule of 700 planes monthly within a few months.

Only the fuselages were made here. Then they were sent 18 miles to Bernburg for wings and engines. The plane was expected to fly 620 miles an hour level speed. The new jet, a single seated fighter, mounts two 37 mm. cannon and has a tricycle landing gear in the slender, 20 foot long fuselage.

PRIVATE'S WILL KEEPS 40 YANK PRISONERS ALIVE

Made Others Steal for Communal Soup

BY JOHN THOMPSON
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

THURINGIA, Germany, April 14 [Delayed]—Gaunt from their prison camp starvation diet, but in better physical condition than the men who survived the death march from Poland, 40 more American war prisoners were liberated when 69th division soldiers entered this lovely provincial city of Thuringia Thursday night.

The prisoners, however, reported they had been well treated by their guards and by German civilians. All of them knew of the extreme brutality in other camps, and told of a camp where, of 120 Americans, four died of starvation and six were clubbed or shot to death by their guards, who beat them daily with canes.

Three from Illinois

The group here, which included three Illinoisans, had survived in better shape due largely to their leader, a private from Maine.

"I was determined to keep all 40 of us alive," he said—tho he'd lost 70 pounds himself. "You can see the men are in pretty fair shape, better than others you've seen. Getting them thru safely has given me the biggest kick of my life."

He took over as leader when no one seemed to be able to organize the men's will to live. He boiled a huge caldron of water, and made every man bathe, shave, and wash his clothes.

"From now on," their new leader told them, "every man steals as much food as he can every day and brings it back to camp at night. We'll make communal soup."

That extra soup, the men believe, kept them going. Their ordinary rations were a cup of ersatz coffee for breakfast, thin mustard, potato, sauerkraut, or turnip soup for lunch, and, at dinner, one loaf of black bread, one spoon of sugar, and one spoon of jam for each six men.

Stole for Prisoners

The private said their guards were mostly older soldiers who had seen much front line fighting. They were humane, and often stole food for the prisoners, while many civilians took the prisoners into their cellars to feed them when the German soldiers were not around.

American prisoners were part of all work details. He said all privates, privates 1st class, and noncommissioned officers who could not provide proper identification were worked. Noncoms and officers were not compelled to work, but the men found it better to work than to remain idle in camp.

"I had a white collar job," said one Yank prisoner. "They had me sweeping the streets."

52 British Freed

In addition to the Americans, other war prisoners freed included 52 British and four empire troops. In the early days of captivity, the private said, the British saved their lives by sharing their Red Cross parcels. Only two American Red Cross parcels reached the Americans.

DAY by DAY on the FARM by GAIL COMPTON

April 15, 1945.

ALL of the oats have been planted at the Fox river farm and in most of the fields the young green seedlings already have pushed to the surface, faintly coloring the brown fields. The legumes also have been seeded in the oat fields and recent rains came at a perfect time to help the newly planted seeds.

More than 150 acres have been plowed for corn and the men are content with the way the work is going. Interruptions by rain were welcome to the dry soil and also gave the manager a chance to do some work on the Angus herd. He has tagged and put identification chains around the necks of 88 open heifers in the black herd. Fifty of the heifers are 16 months of age or older and 38 head are under 10 months. The older animals will be bred in the fall to calve next year on grass.

Cows Are in Clover

The Angus cows have been grazing on a field of rye and some sweet clover which is to be turned under before corn planting. The manager likes to plant a field to sweet clover, graze it for awhile in the spring, and then plow it down for a green manure crop before putting corn into the ground. It gives the corn a boost, he believes, and holds down the drain of fertility caused by the corn.

In another week the blue grass and other pastures will have enough growth to permit the herds to be turned out. The manager has been keeping the animals close to the barn to let the early grass get a good start. If the cows start grazing it too early, the grass will remain short and if the ground still is soft harm may be done to the pasture.

More than 189 young pigs are frolicking on a field of rye near the barn. They were farrowed from only 20 sows, which constitutes a good record. There is one more sow left to farrow.

Season 3 Weeks Ahead

At the Wheaton farm the rains prevented field work for a time. The men still are trying to get the oats seeded. Meanwhile things are growing at a tremendous rate under the influence of warm weather and mild showers. The lilacs are coming into full bloom rapidly. The fruit trees are blossoming and the leaves on the other trees are filling out. The season is about three weeks ahead of time.

Careful attention is being given the fruit trees so the farm will have plenty of pears, cherries, and apples this year. Spraying will help to keep them healthy and assure a clean crop.

The GARDEN by Ben Markland

OF all the vegetable crops planted in war gardens in the last three years, potatoes have been the most disappointing from the standpoint of yields. In the heavy soils common in this area, potatoes sometimes have returned little more than the amount of seed stock planted. The gardener on the Wheaton farm has been able to get returns of from five to eight times the amount of seed stock planted, despite the fact that our soil has a high clay content, but this was made possible by the annual addition of heavy amounts of sand to the potato plot.

A gardener in Mundelein, Ill., reports he had excellent potato yields in heavy soil last season by the use of straw coverings of the potato seed bed. His seed tubers [Sebago variety] were placed about an inch below the soil surface, 12 inches apart in rows 12 inches apart. Immediately after planting the seed he covered the entire patch with 12 inches of loose straw, allowing the potato plants to grow thrú this matting. This type of potato culture long has been practiced in the southern states and is worth a trial by gardeners in this area.

G.A.R. Memorial Parade to Be Held Sunday, May 27

Capt. Thomas Ambrose, commander of the Grand Army of the Republic Memorial association, announced yesterday that the association's Memorial day parade will be held Sunday, May 27, three days before the usual celebration, to prevent interruption of war work. The line of march will be Michigan av. from Chicago av. to Roosevelt rd., he said.

MEAT SUPPLIES STILL DECLINING, NO RELIEF SEEN

Less meat is available to civilians than a month ago and there is no immediate relief in sight, the American Meat Institute said yesterday in a report on a survey made at the request of the office of price administration.

Government regulation of prices was blamed for inadequate production of beef. Under present ceilings feeders are discouraged from feeding to maturity, the report stated, and added:

"If cattle feeders were provided a real incentive for expanding operations, they could substantially increase the nation's meat supply when this is most urgently needed."

Black marketing continues to upset distribution of the limited amount of meat available, the institute said. The survey indicated that illegitimate diversions are increasing and the report declared that they must be brought under effective control.

The survey, which canvassed 751 packing companies and branch houses thruout the country, found very small supplies of meat of all kinds and some cuts of beef and various kinds of sausage less plentiful than a month ago.

Congressional investigation of the food shortage will be resumed today by the committee headed by Rep. Anderson [D., N. M.] which has come to Chicago to question meat producers. Packers and feeders will be heard today and retailers, consumer groups and restaurant men will testify tomorrow.

WALTER SIMMONS
Chicago Tribune war correspondent in the Philippines to keep you in touch with Chicago and midwest men!

FOLLOW Walter Simmons and you follow the war against the Japs with a crack Chicago Tribune war correspondent who is right in there with the fighters.

When American troops invaded Leyte, Walter Simmons gave readers the eye-witness story, naming the names and recounting the exploits of Chicago and midwest men on the surprise landing.

When MacArthur followed thru with his brilliant invasion of Luzon, this well known Chicago Tribune reporter again was there to get the facts. When a 40th division reconnaissance unit penetrated far behind the Jap lines, Simmons went with it, defying enemy fire to be among the first American ground forces to glimpse Clark field.

When the first Yank armored column battled its way into Manila, this Tribune man was with it and won an official citation for exposing himself to enemy fire in order to get the news.

When the first internees were freed from Los Banos camp, Simmons was there, making available to them this newspaper's facilities for sending personal messages to Chicagoland relatives. His later stories describing life in the Philippines under Jap domination were reportorial masterpieces.

Day after day, from the moment he set foot from the plane which flew him 7,250 miles from San Francisco to New Guinea, this midwest born, midwest educated and trained reporter has pursued the news of America's advance with the same unflagging devotion to duty which has won for the Tribune foreign staff a string of lustrous firsts unmatched in war journalism.

In war or peace, there is no substitute for eye-witness accounts by competent news gatherers who are on the spot to see what they are writing about. Today Walter Simmons is delivering for Tribune readers because he has the experience and know-how gained from years of intensive application to the reporting job.

Simmons began his newspaper career in Sioux Falls, South Dakota, first as a reporter, then as a special writer and later as a city editor. Coming to the Tribune as a special writer for the Sunday Tribune Color Graphic section, he clicked at once on difficult assignments requiring extensive research and painstaking attention to detail. He won his war assignment as a result of his proved ability to deliver the facts in the forthright manner that readers want.

For the full story of the war, as seen by Americans who write from the American viewpoint and name the names of Chicago and midwest men at the fronts, follow Walter Simmons and all the rest of the Tribune's own independent reporters who make up a larger staff of war correspondents than are accredited to any two other Chicago newspapers combined.

ALLIED CONTROL HANGS LIGHTLY OFF MAIN ROADS

Few Americans Seen in Reich Hinterland

BY LARRY RUE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, April 15—From Godesberg to Coblenz military traffic continues heavy as American supplies pour across the Rhine over which we now have more bridges than the Germans ever did.

Yet off the main roads our military occupation hangs lightly over the civil population. When I got to Remagen I headed inland over mountain trails. Until I hit a main road leading into Bad Neuenyahr I saw no signs of Americans.

Much of this country is wooded and there are numerous farms and farmhouses in seemingly good condition. At each there was some live stock. But there were no big herds of cows any place. In the smaller villages, chickens and geese cluttered the roads, but I was told the country is largely denuded of poultry. I got back on the main road along the Rhine and continued on to Coblenz, passing over indifferent farming country where, however, tilling and plowing were going on.

Coblenz in Good Condition

I heard lots of stories about how Coblenz was flattened by bombing, but Coblenz looked in fairly good condition. Numerous houses were intact or rebuildable and the suburbs to the south seemed in fairly good shape.

The military setups seemed to be almost identical in the big towns and I wanted to visit the small detachments they sent out to the outlying districts. I took a road to Mayen and there saw how Lt. Jonathan B. Rintels, a lawyer of Brookline, Mass., with two other officers and five enlisted men, ran that town and its surrounding landkreis extending to Andernach.

Mayen had a population of 15,000 until the evacuation which followed a raid by 8th air force heavy bombers Jan. 26. Thirteen hundred, I was told, were killed by our bombers. The center of the town is badly smashed but the suburbs are untouched and now 5,000 civilians are living in the town and more are coming in daily.

Local Government Problem

On the road from Coblenz I passed several groups of displaced persons. About 100 a day cleared thru Mayen.

"But that is not our main trouble here," said Rintels. "It is getting the city and landkreis administrations working. Two communists wanted to reorganize the government on a party basis and they were somewhat astonished to learn that we had no intention to play party politics. This territory is 90 per cent Catholic and I want the local administration to be representative of the community."

Rintels had some difficulty finding a suitable burgomaster and a head for the landkreis but finally found an old burgomaster replaced by Hitler in 1933 and another lawyer who had gotten in bad grace with Hitler for defending Jews.

Court Cases Described

Rintels held summary court twice a week and the log ran something like this:

Anton Wetler, fined for traveling without a pass; Christine Geisbirch and Elfrieda Dool, sentenced to five days in jail for trying to sneak past the guards, after two previous arrests for traveling without a pass. Some looters were punished under the German criminal law.

One of the interpreters for Rintels was a formerly naturalized American, Andrew Ksenich, 48, who had been with our army of occupation in the last war and was naturalized in Lorraine, O., in 1922. He had been in America since 1900. During service with our army of occupation in the Coblenz area he had met a girl and in 1923 came over to marry her and bring her back to the United States. "She was afraid of the ocean," Ksenich said, "so I stayed in Germany." He neglected to have his passport renewed in 1928.

Ksenich worked in a stone quarry as a common laborer and said he earned six marks daily and sometimes his pay was as high as 12 to 15 marks. He said this was enough for him to bring up his family.

Coal Shortage Hurts

They had not felt any shortage of bread or potatoes and before our bombing, fish from the Baltic were not difficult to get. Last winter, however, every one suffered in the coal shortage when coal was rationed to two long tons a family for a year and sold for around 33 marks a ton.

He had had trouble educating his children as all the schools have been closed now for six months.

Continuing up the Moselle valley toward Trier we dropped in on Capt. Clarence De Veuve of San Francisco, Cal., who, with five enlisted men and three officers, was running the administration of Kochem, a wine center.

The normal population, 5,000, was reduced to less than half of that by evacuation but De Veuve's authority takes in Landkern with its 40,000 people whose livelihood before the war was derived mainly from the wine industry and tourist trade.

Most of Town Intact

The center of Kochem was blasted when the 8th air force destroyed the bridge on the Trier-Coblenz railway but most of the holiday resort is intact and the civil administration already had the town in running condition—lights, water, and sewage plants operating.

Here, as at Mayen, the banks have reopened under our supervision.

De Veuve also found plentiful food supplies to meet present needs but was printing new ration cards which reduced the civil population to the prescribed 1,150 calories.

CAR THIEF SHOT, 2D MAN FLEES AFTER HOLDUP

Jerry McBride, 33, Negro, of 133 E. 31st st., was shot by police yesterday as he and a Negro companion fled the wreckage of a stolen automobile after a 3 mile chase in which seven police squads took part. The companion escaped.

The men stole $19 and his automobile from William Brant, 5824 S. California av., at 44th st. and Drexel av. At a filling station at 6200 S. State st., they forced the attendant, Herman Cramer, 6423 Eggleston av., and four customers to lie on the floor, taking a watch and two rings valued at $500.

Cramer and a customer, Rubin Goldman, 4027 Lake Park av., a county jail guard, gave chase and squads from the Wabash and Woodlawn stations and the park district joined the hunt. At 43d st. and South Park av., the fleeing car struck a parked automobile. Policeman Harry Koney of the park district police shot McBride in the leg.

PLANE WRECKED IN WEST VIRGINIA HILLS; 20 KILLED

Morgantown, W. Va., April 15 (AP)—The wreckage of a Pennsylvania Central Airlines transport with 17 passengers and three crewmen dead was found today on a mountainside deep in the West Virginia hills, where the liner crashed in a storm yesterday.

Capt. H. H. Jones

The big plane, en route from Pittsburgh, Pa., to Birmingham, Ala., was smashed in pieces and the bodies of the victims mangled. Wreckage lay strewn thru a thousand yards of underbrush.

Searchers reached the transport this afternoon after it had been spotted from the air by one of several planes searching since it was reported overdue last night. The plane, flight No. 142, left Pittsburgh at 4:37 p. m. [3:37 Chicago time] yesterday.

Crashes in State Forest

The scene of the crash was in Coopers Rock state forest, situated in the Cheat mountain range of Preston county.

Wisps of smoke rose from charred wreckage. Clothing fluttered from broken tree tops.

Coming in slightly off its course the plane hit the tree tops and dropped its left wing.

Searchers discovered a watch stopped at 5:06 p. m. A heavy overcast hung on the mountain tops at that time yesterday.

Five Service Men Victims

Five of the passengers were service men, the others civilians. Crew members were:

Capt. Harold H. Jones, 32, Norfolk, Va., pilot, who had a record of 6,500 hours in the air.

William Thomas Repack, 29, McKees Rocks, Pa., co-pilot.

Miss Marion Adams, 21, Pittsburgh, Pa., stewardess.

The passengers included Alphonse V. Devak, 24, 2600 Glos av., Bellwood, Ill.

[Devak was employed by a Chicago welding equipment manufacturer. He was a son-in-law of Andrew Frenzel, Melrose Park village president.]

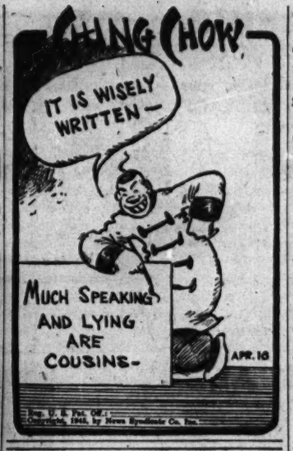
None of the service men was from the Chicago area.



CHICAGO YANK ON FIRST TRAIN HELPING PATTON

Lt. James R. Holmes, 43, of 2344 N. Cicero av., was senior officer aboard the first train to cross the German border from the west in support of Gen. Patton's 3d army, it is disclosed in the Yankee Boomer, a paper published in France for the personnel of the 1st military railway service. The incident occurred on Feb. 10. Lt. Holmes, who is road foreman of engines in an operating company, held a similar job with the Chicago and North Western railway before he was commissioned in December, 1943. He is a veteran of World War I.

U. S. GUNS BREAK UP 3 ATTACKS BY OKINAWA JAPS

Battle Line Unchanged for 12th Day.

GUAM, April 16 [Monday]—(AP)—Three Japanese counter-attacks were broken up by artillery Saturday night along the bitterly contested "little Siegfried line" of southern Okinawa, and the lines remained unchanged yesterday for the 12th straight day.

Marines in the north continued to mop up small groups of the enemy in their drive which has carried them to within 10 miles of the northern tip of the Ryukyu island.

One isolated Japanese force on the western side of Motobu peninsula offered stiff resistance, Adm. Nimitz reported in his bulletin today.

Invade New Isle

Keufu Island in the Kerama group just off Okinawa's southwest coast was invaded yesterday. Eight of the Kerama Islands were seized by the 77th army division shortly before the invasion of Okinawa began Easter morning.

No mention was made of Japanese planes raiding American shipping or ground targets. A heavy toll of 265 planes was exacted from enemy air fleets over the area for three days late last week.

Tokyo radio claimed Japanese planes carried out "large scale" assaults on American shipping at Okinawa at dawn today [Monday], saying details were awaited.

Fleet patrol bombers hit Tanega Island in the northern Ryukyus yesterday. Army and marine planes bombed and strafed Haha, Chichi, and Muko in the Bonins, just north of Iwo Island.

Lt. William Moore, 2006 W. Grove st., Blue Island, Ill., was a member of one fighter section which bagged 5 Jap planes in the battle.

Mitscher's Flagship Attacked

ABOARD ADM. MITSCHER'S FLAGSHIP, OFF OKINAWA, April 13 [Delayed]—(AP)—One Japanese suicide pilot came within 20 or 25 yards of crashing his burning plane into Vice Adm. Mitscher's carrier flagship and another was shot into the ocean only 100 yards away yesterday.

The action occurred as Mitscher's pilots and ships' guns beat off a series of new Japanese attempts to destroy the Pacific fleet. Pilots and ships' gunners shot down more than 200 enemy planes.

Tracer shells marked the line of fire from this ships' guns as they converged on a plunging Japanese plane, tearing into its wings and fuselage. A few yards away from this flagship the plane faltered and nosed over slowly.

Another attacked the opposite side of this carrier. This plane, too, broke thru the heavy anti-aircraft fire. It came on to within approximately 100 yards of the port side before it, too, plunged into the sea.

GASOLINE ALLEY

HUMAN MORTAR HURLS A SHELL BACK INTO JAPS

Wisconsin Yank Also Wields U. S. Metal

BY THOMAS MORROW

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

OKINAWA ISLAND, Ryukyus, April 14 [Delayed]—Staff Sgt. Beaufordt Anderson of Soldiers Grove, Wis., who keeps his battalion in the 381st regiment, 96th division, happy with his wisecracks, became a human mortar today.

He and 10 others were in an Okinawa tomb on the front lines when they heard the chattering of Japs, fortified by sake [rice wine], coming to counter-attack. A flare showed them setting up a machine gun a short distance away.

"Look!" called Anderson. "Japs. Lots of them."

The army detail opened up. Anderson seized a 60 mm. mortar shell, pulled the safety pin, hit it on a rock to arm it, and hurled it into the attacking Japs.

Throws a Jap Shell

He repeated with a second mortar shell, then three more. Then he looked longingly at a large Japanese mortar dud.

"They threw it at us," he decided. "Might as well throw it back."

He lifted the shell, which had not exploded because it did not hit on its nose, and cast it into the Japanese. He was rewarded by an explosion and cries of pain. Some one remarked that Anderscon might have lost an arm. He said he figured he wouldn't need an arm if the Japs got in.

The attack broke off as some one killed the Japanese captain as he put a foot on the wall surrounding the tomb. Next morning the party counted 22 dead Japanese in various states of disrepair, seven light machine guns, three knee mortars, the officer's sword and his silver flask full of sake.

Pvt. Sam Cohen, Detroit, Mich., said he put three notches in his carbine the morning after the attack.

Pvt. John Korth, 515 Lynn st., Champaign, Ill., was one of the 11 in the tomb. He crawled out thru mortar fire to bring back a wounded buddy.

"I didn't think we'd get out of there," he said. "I was determined they wouldn't take me. I was going to keep one in my pistol."

Sgt. Fred Erdman Jr., 2844 Dickens av., Chicago, covered the left flank of the attacked party from a second tomb 100 yards away.

Strangles a Jap

Staff Sgt. Harry Brenner, Burnips, Mich., was given credit for some smart fighting. He rallied the men and kept them together in spite of mortar, artillery, and rocket fire.

Staff Sgt. Walter G. Schmidt, 3645 N. Albany av., Chicago, had a quiet night during the counter-attack. He was still considering an escape the day before when he got ahead of the lines during an attack. After spending seven hours sprawled on a hill several hundred yards from the Japs, with mortars splattering all around him, he crawled to safety when the fire decreased.

Pvt. Paul E. Jones, East Peoria, Ill., had a little difficulty during the attempted infiltration. A Jap leaped into his foxhole. He disarmed the enemy, held him to the ground, and got his pistol. It wouldn't fire, so he threw his 200 pounds on the wriggling Japanese and strangled him. He displayed two sore hands and a Japanese sword as souvenirs.

A casual count estimated 423 Japanese had been killed during the counter-attack.

Gen. Wainwright Well, Radio from Tokyo Says

San Francisco, Cal., April 15 (AP)—A message represented as being from Lt. Gen. Jonathan Wainwright, commander of United States army forces in the Philippines who surrendered to the Japanese at the fall of Corregidor, saying he was well, comfortable, and in good health, was recorded here today. The message was broadcast from Tokyo, being read by the station announcer, and was addressed to Gen. Wainwright's wife at Skaneateles, N. Y.

Wife Receives Message

Skaneateles, N. Y., April 15 (AP)—Mrs. Jonathan Wainwright said tonight she had received a message from Tokyo, purportedly from her husband, Lt. Gen. Wainwright.

NAZIS DIVIDE GERMANY INTO 2 POLITICAL ZONES

[By Wireless to the New York Times and The Chicago Tribune]

GERMAN-SWISS FRONTIER, April 16 [Monday]—Admitting that a junction of the eastern and the western allied fronts is but a matter of days, the Nazi triumvirate Heinrich Himmler, Field Marshal Gilbert von Kesselring, and Martin Bormann has decreed the existence of two autonomous governments for the "northern and the southern defensive districts" with independent political and military staffs and a party directorate in each. No mention was made of the Fuehrer.

Reported by the disorganized DNB News bureau, the triumvirate assumes politico-military direction of a zone vaguely described as the "southern defensive area," with Marshal Kesselring commanding the army, Himmler the SS and Bormann the Nazi party.

The northern zone, described as "from the North sea to Leipzig," is to be under the political direction of Hellmuth Friederich, formerly Bormann's aide de camp. Military operations will be under Field Marshal Ernst von Busch, recalled from the northeastern front.

THE WORLD'S HOARD OF DOLLARS

The world outside the United States at the end of the war will have more gold and more dollar balances than ever before. These funds now amount to more than 20 billion dollars, compared with 7 or 8 billion in 1929 and 5 billion at the end of the other war. The rest of the world today has far greater ability to command American goods than when the war started. Foreigners have enough dollars and gold to enable them to buy huge amounts of American goods, "without," as the federal reserve bank bulletin of last November pointed out, "resorting to currency depreciation, or exchange control, or drastic measures of internal deflation."

The world outside the United States is not short of money to spend here as soon as the war is over. Grandiose lending schemes such as those worked out at Bretton Woods are not needed to help our foreign trade. Other peoples already have the means to pay for all the goods we shall want to sell abroad for some time.

Foreign nations between January 1941 and September 1944 acquired 5 billion dollars of gold. A billion of that came from America, and the rest from new production. Since Pearl Harbor our gold reserve has fallen 2¼ billion dollars. In addition to our gold, the countries of the world have acquired bank balances in the United States, which increased 2 billion dollars between December 1941 and November 30, 1944. In gold and dollars, foreigners are richer by 7 billion than they were when we entered the war. While other countries have grown wealthy as a result of American spending on account of the war, America has grown poorer. The result is that required gold backing for the dollar has been reduced to 25 per cent, while other currencies have been strengthened.

These facts are pertinent to a question now before congress. It was in April 1943 when outlines of the international monetary fund were first made known. That fund calls for 2¾ billion dollar subscription by America to promote the stabilization of other countries. Since that date, we have lost 1¾ billion dollars in gold to other nations, and in addition foreign ownership of American dollar deposits has gone up 1¼ billion. Thus we have already contributed in our spending abroad more money than it was said we should contribute toward the stabilization of currencies. If there was ever any justification for Bretton Woods, it has ceased to exist.

COLONIES AND SECURITY

Mr. Sumner Welles rightly says that if the San Francisco conference really intends to promote peace it must go into the question of colonies. The colonial powers naturally take the opposite view. Their interest in a world league is in protecting their spoils.

Mr. Welles developed his case most recently in a printed debate with Mr. Walter Lippmann, who urged that the United States' own interests in Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico and the Virgin islands make pussyfooting on the colonial question the policy of self-interest for us. Mr. Welles retorted that the question of military bases essential to national security is distinct from that of colonies. Occupation of bases affects the lives of a few thousands of people; colonial exploitation touches millions.

Our treatment of the people resident in our territorial possessions can be improved as Mr. Welles points out, altho the only American possession where there has been any important agitation for independence is Puerto Rico. The Puerto Ricans have had considerable political training under our flag. If they want independence we should give it to them, retaining only such rights in the island as are necessary to the defense of the United States.

Neither the Alaskans nor the Hawaiians have any desire for independence. What they want is the common American right of self-government. Hawaii wants statehood, and the only barrier to it that requires consideration is its Japanese-American population whose loyalty can no longer be seriously questioned. Mr. Ickes' rule of Alaska is intolerably paternalistic. It should be reformed, the population freed of the burocratic restrictions that make them second class citizens, and if these reforms produce a sufficient growth in population, the territory should be granted statehood.

Since we insist on military bases necessary to our own protection, we must concede the same right to other powers. We can make no honest objection to Great Britain's maintaining such strongholds as Gibraltar and Malta, nor to her retention of the defenses of the Suez canal, in which her past position as the leading trading nation has always made her interest paramount. But national defense has nothing to do with colonial tyranny such as Great Britain has imposed on so much of the world.

We cannot lend ourselves, as the country upon which any world organization must depend for its greatest military power, to the continuing abuses in India and elsewhere by master races, be they English, French or Dutch. We cannot lend our power to the shameful exploitation of people who, while they have considerable capacity for self-government, have been forced to submit to foreign rulers because they lack military power to free themselves.

LANGUAGES AS TAUGHT

Lately a large number of students in the public high schools of Chicago have become interested in studying the Spanish language. They may feel, as many young people do, that Latin America offers great opportunities in the post-war world.

Language courses in the city schools are optional, and that's just as well. Many students have made unfavorable appraisals of the caliber of instruction. Their teachers, they say, have too frequently lacked a real familiarity with the languages they endeavor to teach. The instructors have studied under others whose grasp of the language was in turn based upon classroom instruction and the study of textbooks, rather than upon familiarity with the spoken tongue.

In these circumstances, it is to be expected that the student will center his efforts on acquiring a vocabulary, will develop some knowledge of grammar, but as a rule will be weak on accent and ability to think with any degree of ease in the language he is endeavoring to master. He will lack ability to speak it, and altho he may develop a certain competence in writing it, he will not express himself with ease. The result is that he will fail in the real purposes for which he seeks the language. He will not be able to communicate with facility in dealing with those born to the tongue, and he will probably not develop any wide acquaintance with the literature.

The perfunctory teaching of foreign languages thus becomes too often a waste of the pupil's time and the city's money, altho some exceptional teachers may be able to inculcate a knowledge and enthusiasm not customary to Chicago classrooms. If languages are to be taught at all, the caliber of instruction should be improved so that pupils will attain a speaking knowledge as well as writing ability. Anything less is futile.

MAYOR KELLY IS SMART

One need not indorse Mayor Kelly's policies in order to recognize his really extraordinary political acumen. Mayor Kelly is not merely the boss of Chicago. He is at the moment the boss of Illinois, or at least of its legislature.

The mayor's stack of chips at Springfield when the current session opened was not impressive. There was a Republican state administration, a solidly Republican senate, and a nominally Republican house. The nominal Republicanism of the house was the mayor's entering wedge. Actually, thru half a dozen Republican representatives elected from gang wards, whom he has pretty much in his vest pocket, the mayor probably could, if he desired, block any legislative program to which he was opposed. But by means of this negative power he has been able to achieve positive control of the legislative program.

The major bills that the legislature has been passing are the mayor's bills. Mayor Kelly got his traction program, a measure of questionable value. Such virtues as it possesses arise largely from the tax exemption of the proposed municipal system, which will be paid for, of course, by the remaining taxpayers of the community. Effective control of the transit commission that will operate the consolidated lines, with their very large pay rolls, decide where extensions are to go, and fix fares, will rest in the city hall.

The mayor appears to be about to get his public housing bill, and incorporated in it, the great injustice of tax exemption, again at the expense of the other taxpayers of the city. Control of the project is so placed that the Democratic organization in Chicago can use the accommodations, subsidized by this tax exemption, to reward its supporters.

If the proposal for the constitutional convention is put over, it will be because of Mayor Kelly's support. Nobody knows what is back of the proposal, aside from the CIO, which is its most vociferous proponent. The mayor has also been taking the side of the libelers in their effort to provide loopholes which would make the radio libel bill innocuous to liars and character assassins.

At the moment the only important legislation that seems destined to come out of this session without having originated in the city hall is the most extravagant state budget in history. As submitted to the legislature it provides a biennial expenditure of more than 600 million dollars and abandons the sound principle, established four years ago by Gov. Green, of setting aside excess sales tax receipts, collection of which has been greatly increased by inflationary prices and spending, for post-war construction. The current budget contemplates that the abnormal tax revenue will be spent as fast as it comes in.

This whole phenomenon might, of course, be explained by saying that developments at Springfield reflect the trend of the times; that state socialism, state competition with business, and lavish public spending are the order of the day. We don't accept this explanation because we don't believe the people of Illinois voted that way in the last election. They had a chance to vote for exponents of New Dealism, but they chose instead to elect a Republican governor and a Republican legislature. In spite of their vote, they find Illinois in the forefront of the trend toward socialism and its New Deal counterpart, public extravagance, and this largely because of the influence at Springfield of Mayor Kelly.

Whatever the explanations, the fact remains that Mayor Kelly is the smartest politician in the state of Illinois. We only hope that the people of the state can bear up under the consequences.

BUNDLES FOR AMERICA

The efforts of Bundles for America, Inc., to relieve distress among families of men in our army and navy deserve a word of approval. There is no lack of organizations appealing for help for the civilian victims of war abroad. There are civilians in this country who have a prior claim on our generosity. They include those wives and children of our service men who are in need of clothing and the unborn babies for whom layettes should be provided. April has been designated by the national war relief control board as Bundles for America month. We are confident that Chicago will not fail to do its share in support of this patriotic enterprise.

There was another and better way, if La Guardia had known. Butch might have closed the joints at midnight, Chicago time.—Detroit News.

THE TRAGIC MUSE

Among poems on the death of notable figures in history, we have always had a fancy for Tennyson's "Ode on the Death of the Duke of Wellington." Our taste may be deprecated by the fantastic moderns, who frequently use Tennyson's name as a hissing word, but we have not seen any of them rise to a solemn national occasion with such complete success. As a poet laureate with a ceremonial duty to perform, Tennyson proved himself worthy of the wreath.

His long ode for the Iron Duke marches, in varied rhythms, with the measured tread of a funeral procession. Its structure is symphonic. Its simple closing, after elaborate historical and patriotic flights of fancy, is often quoted:

Speak no more of his renown,
Lay your earthly fancies down,
And in the vast cathedral leave him—
God accept him, Christ receive him!

The copious anthology of poems on the death of President Lincoln began with Walt Whitman's four, of which "O Captain! My Captain!" and "When Lilacs Last in the Dooryard Bloomed" are hardy perennials. It continues to grow, especially thru the work of Thomas Curtis Clark, a frequent contributor to this column. He has published a collection of 100 Lincoln poems.

Lincoln's death caused Punch, the English weekly which had frequently satirized him, to publish a poem by the editor as that journal's apology and atonement. It has a special place in Lincoln literature because its author was Tom Taylor, who wrote "Our American Cousin," the play that was in performance when the tragedy occurred.

THREE WINDOWS

Here in my room are windows three.
If I look thru the one to the east, I see
A lilac bush in generous bloom,
Gorgeous color, and soft perfume,
Purple feathers in emerald setting,
Soothing a heart that's bent on fretting.

Straight to the front is the busy street—
Trucks and cars, and hurrying feet,
Faces sorrowful, faces glowing,
Life in the making, flowing, flowing!
Who could be lonely, and sit and sigh
With so much to watch as it passes by!

But to the west is a yard grown over
With little patches of weeds and clover;
A yard that used to resound all day
With voices of neighborhood boys at play.
Now it is empty, and quiet, and bare—

Boys who had to grow up too soon,
Flying bombers into the moon,
Diving subs to the ocean floor,
Young feet marching off to war!

I pulled down tight the shade to the west.
And that was the window I liked the best!

A Total Oblivion Party

Let this lean and hungry world, now completely at the mercy of the planners who never get discouraged by the results of their utopian schemes, consider the menu of a private dinner for 12 enlightened Englishmen two centuries ago. It is recorded in the diary of James Boswell, the busybody who pursued Dr. Samuel Johnson with a notebook. Bozzy says the happy 12 sat down to a feast composed of:

Two soups, two dishes of fish, stewed beef, boiled lamb and spinach, fricandeau of veal, beefsteaks, hot and cold game, omelet, and pastry. To wash down the viands the diners had Madeira, sherry, port, old hock, Burgundy, and champagne. "The generous bottle," he confesses, "circulated so as to produce in me total oblivion."

MAGNOLIA IN BLOOM

Like candles on a shrine
Wrought for Nature's adoration,

Their chaste white blossoms
Tinged with flame.
Like swaying censers of delight,
Your flowers unfold
Their perfumed prayer:
O, Beauty,
Accept this sacrifice!

Problem in Men's Apparel

So we needed some bed sheets and I began to look, but no sheets were to be seen anywhere except in one department store. When they told me the price, $6 per sheet, I fainted and fell flat on the floor.

When I was revived I asked the customary question: "Where am I?" and they told me. I said the sheets were too high priced, and they told me where I could go, and I told them where they could go, which happened to be the same spot.

Upon arriving home I figured that as long as men's shirts are $3 and up each, and you could easily get four tailless shirts from each sheet, I might as well order a half dozen.

They may be too expensive for sheets, but I can always cut them into shirts. Roy Engel

Friend of the Yanks

[The FRIEND OF THE YANKS SERVICE OFFICE, 1 S. Dearborn st., will give personal advice and assistance to veterans, service men, and their dependents. Questions also will be answered by phone, Superior 0200, or by mail if stamped envelope is sent.]

Mrs. A. M. E. writes: "My son is about to enter the navy. I already have one overseas and am receiving a family allowance of $37 a month. Can my younger son, who also has been a partial support since the elder has been in service, make an allotment? I am a widow.

If both of your sons contributed a substantial portion of your support, each is entitled to make allotment for family allowances. The son who is about to enter service must apply for the allotment and you will have to support his dependency claim by affidavit.

Mother of Two Sailors writes: "My son recently was enlisted in the navy for general service. When I signed his consent papers I was told he would have to stay in service two years or for the duration of the war, whichever is longer. When a friend signed for his son, he was informed the boy would be released six months after the war, regardless of whether he had served the full two years. He was, however, to be subject to recall in case of an emergency for the balance of the two years."

Both boys were enlisted in the naval reserve. They may be kept in service for the duration of the war and six months thereafter, and then they will return to reserve status. As reservists they may be recalled until expiration of their enlistment.

DANGER LIES IN CARBON MONOXIDE

IT is not unusual for most of us to be baffled by chemistry but certain phases of this science are capable of stumping even the expert. Carbon is a common element found in coal and wood. When combined with two parts of oxygen, a gas is formed which we call "carbon dioxide." This material is harmless. In fact, we exhale it with every breath.

A different mixture is produced if the same carbon unites with one part of oxygen. This means carbon monoxide—a poison. Why these seemingly related substances act so differently remains a mystery.

Carbon monoxide is generated whenever and wherever combustion takes place. It is colorless, odorless, and nonirritating hence we have no warning of its presence. About 25 per cent of illuminating gas is made up of this noxious compound. Smaller quantities are thrown off in auto exhausts and coal gas. It exists in the vicinity of smoldering fires, coal dust explosions, and kilns. A moderate amount in the air will result in headache within three hours whereas larger percentages may prove fatal.

The gas is inhaled and attacks the tiny blood cells as they pass thru the lungs. Gradually the oxygen in the hemoglobin is replaced by carbon monoxide and, as a result, the blood turns a characteristic cherry red. The union may be so firm that separation is almost impossible. The number of corpuscles affected depends upon the concentration and the length of time the victim is subjected to the fumes.

Acute poisoning, usually suicidal, manifests itself in dizziness, nausea, and vomiting. Later, drowsiness and coma ensue. If unconsciousness lasts for 24 hours or more the outlook is not good. Should recovery occur, however, severe nervous reactions may follow.

Ordinarily our streets and highways are safe, despite the fact that every automobile discharges about two cubic feet of carbon monoxide per minute. In certain congested areas, chronic poisoning is noted among traffic policemen. Garage workers and furnacemen may likewise be affected. Weakness, dizziness, and headache are the usual complaints. These symptoms also may develop in individuals who insist upon driving with the windows of the auto closed. Mechanical defects—easily remedied—often allow the gas to seep thru the floor boards and contaminate the air in the vehicle.

Allow an engine to operate within a sealed space and only a few moments are required to pollute the air. The one who breathes such an atmosphere may collapse quickly. Because the senses are dulled there may not be sufficient time to call for help. Furthermore the victim may not be able to coördinate sufficiently to escape, once aware of this peril.

For the acute case, oxygen with 5 to 10 per cent carbon dioxide is the most effective treatment. With an unconscious patient, it should be administered by means of an inhalator. If this apparatus is not available, artificial respiration may be given.

JUNGLE ROT

M. S. writes: I have heard of lads returning from the South Pacific with jungle rot on the hands and feet. What is this disease?

REPLY

This seems to be a popular term for any and every type of skin infection encountered in that part of the world, where such disorders flourish and spread rapidly. No doubt it includes many types of ringworm, boils, insect bites, and the rash common to tropical diseases.

HARD TO CURE

S. B. writes: I have had barber's itch for two years and no treatment, including penicillin, has been of value. Is there anything else to do?

REPLY

Occasionally this condition is so stubborn that it taxes the ingenuity of the best skin specialist. Be sure that the diagnosis is correct and that all types of treatment have been tried.

HEART DISORDERS

M. S. writes: Are endocarditis and bacterial endocarditis the same?

REPLY

Both mean inflammation of the membranes lining the heart and the valves. But the prefix "bacterial" implies a type which is frequently associated with the presence of germs in the blood stream.

The Re-Americanization of Guam

A Chamorro wedding took place on Guam a few days ago, and a friend of ours, an ensign in the navy, was among the privileged guests. He was amazed at the bride's dress, a long blue satin gown of the species popular in S. Halsted st., for all the other women on Guam wear, always, loose cotton dresses which seem to have been just laundered. A 20 piece navy band escorted the bride down the short main street of the village to the fandango, or feast, which in accordance with Chamorro custom was held in advance of the wedding. The menu was a delicious mixture of east and west and contained vegetable soup, corn bread, rolls, sweet biscuits, G. I. butter, jam, rice, barbecued cow, meat loaf, beef stew, ribs, chicken, pork, potato salad, lemonade, ice cream, and a three tiered wedding cake, as well as three other kinds of cake. The feminine guests, by the way, wore bobby sox and navy sneakers, and jitterbugged all evening.

Guam, he says, rapidly is becoming Americanized. Quonset huts dot the island, and asphalt roads are being poured out like toothpaste from a tube. One morning you will wallow to your ankles in red-brown clay. The next time you pass, a road of asphalt and rock has been laid, and trucks and jeeps are rolling down it. Cement tennis courts and asphalt volleyball courts have been built and are crowded with enlisted men and officers, perspiring and tanned in the hot, moist air. Bobby Riggs, the former tennis star, displays his technique once a week. Peace time celebrities dot the island like confetti, among them Jackie Cooper, playing the drum in a navy show, and Tommy Riggs, creator of Betty Lou, the lady dummy. Charles Butterworth also is there with what our friend describes fervently as a stinker of a USO show.

The boys on Guam, he says, are pretty sick of weak USO shows where the girls think their only function is to display the obvious feminine accessories. [As proof, he cited the conversation of some marines, violent in telling of their fury at a half dozen starlets from Hollywood who raced around in shorts and brassieres.] On the almost womanless island, the boys prefer not to have their memories jolted into life by such stimuli. The USO shows too often have lame comedy, Hollywood clothes horses who cannot entertain, and second raters who think they are stars because of the generously given applause. Actually the boys prefer the homemade shows, the most popular of which is "The Merry Men of the Marines." This is a variety show, with new, fresh comedy, topnotch music, and fine performers formerly with such bands as Fred Waring's, Bob Crosby's, and Woody Herman's.

Altho Guam has been secure for several months, Japs are still about, 200 or 300 hiding in caves and thickly wooded ravines. At night they prowl and do a bit of shooting and neck carving, sometimes in their search for food infiltrating near the administration buildings, where the crackle of rifle shots dots the night as marines try to hit a moving shadow. The marines conduct regular patrols, but the Seabees, indefatigable souvenir hunters, have little picnics in which they pack lunches and explore the caves.

All Guam is laughing about the Jap admiral on a recently captured island who has holed himself into a luxuriously furnished, well stocked, and well protected cave. Here he sits with his staff and servants, adamant to the entreaties and threats of the marines outside, who come daily with a sound truck to offer him honorable surrender, Havana cigars, sake, and nice rice. One day he got sick of the sound truck's bleating and made a retaliatory record, which he plays to the visiting marines over his public address system. The recording voices the admiral's defiance in a screaming, falsetto sing-song and is rather monotonous, as it plays only two words over and over again, but marines come from miles around to hear it, for the words are Anglo-Saxon and not only does he mispronounce them, but he uses them backward.

CHICAGO APES BERLIN

Chicago, April 11—It is vitally important for Americans to face the truth if we wish to save our country from foreign "isms." Step by step we have followed the Nazi government plan, beginning with rationing. Now we are adding a public housing plan, despite the objections of business men who have studied real estate problems for a lifetime. In Germany private enterprise, subsidized by government funds, erected huge, modern, beautiful, low cost housing, with no taxes to pay for 10 years. Private owners of property, offering four rooms for about $45 monthly, found that apartments which were not modern could not meet this competition. So, in order to rent them at all, they had to accept so low a price that all they realized was barely enough for taxes. The taxes they paid helped carry the government projects. Necessary repairs on their own property could not be made, nor could they undertake any modernization. As soon as government goes into competition, private holdings always suffer this fate. We have too many sociologists and sob sisters with a little knowledge of their own hobbies and too little common business sense. M. A. B.

THE BOYS' CLUBS

Chicago, April 10—On behalf of the Chicago Boys' clubs we thank you for your coöperation in making Boys' Club week a great success. Never before has our cause received such excellent coverage. Our work has been going on quietly and unspectacularly for many years, and it has been a tremendous encouragement to us to have you folks take such a wholehearted interest in what we are doing for the less privileged youngsters of Chicago.

We are dependent upon the public for almost all our financial support. The boost that you gave us is causing many inquiries and offers of further assistance. Every one seems to think that there should be more boys' clubs, so don't be surprised if we announce an expansion program in the near future, at which time we want you to share the credit for helping to make it possible. IRVING RUDOLPH, Executive Vice President

BIRD LIFE

Riverside, Ill., April 4—May I express my appreciation for the fine articles on bird life that appear frequently in the Day by Day on the Farm column? I have them all in my bird scrapbook. It was very interesting, for instance, to look back to the article about the releasing of the 20 wood ducklings last July, then paste in beside it the one in THE TRIBUNE yesterday about the putting up of the nesting boxes for those who return this spring. Is it too much to hope for some more of your fine bird pictures in color? ETHEL P. OWEN

FOR "HEROIC" RIBBON CLERKS

Chicago, April 14—After reading about the exploits of the army heroes on the Montgomery Ward front I got to wondering if a suitable decoration will be given to these courageous stalwarts.

As a fitting tribute to the veterans of the battle of the fitting booths let us give them something ducky with a lavender ribbon and a pair of crossed lipsticks flanked by gin bottles rampant on a pair of pink panties. JOHN E. DESCH

AVOIDING LAUNDRY TROUBLE

Evanston, Ill., April 13—May I say a word about this laundry situation? If you women who are having trouble will observe a few simple rules, you will find you will have an easier time.

1. Don't choose a laundry because it is cheap. Pick one in good standing, a place which has a reputation to keep up, and, if you are a good customer who sends a decent bundle and who pays her bills, they need your patronage, especially with the post-war period approaching.
2. If you have a good laundry and are moving out of its orbit, ask them to recommend some one in your new location. There is an American Laundry institute and laundries have a rating.
3. Remember your laundry is no better than its route man. He should be able and willing to take care of all complaints. If he isn't, you might as well change. I have had 25 years of sending laundry out, and I know.
4. Make a laundry list and a duplicate. If they accept your count, from there on it's their baby. The better laundries used to call and tell you if your list was incorrect and ask if they should go ahead and return the bundle. War has changed that.
5. Laundries, perhaps more than any other business, make mistakes. They can't avoid it. Be fair. Most places ask for three weeks in which to find missing articles. A month is fair to both.
6. Finally, if you know you are right and can't get an adjustment, refuse to settle your bill until they do what is right. That doesn't sound so good, but it's what they are doing to you. E. G. T.

NO CHAIRS IN KINDERGARTEN

Chicago, April 6—Recently my 5 year old daughter started kindergarten at a near-by public school. Since then I have talked with neighbors and friends about a condition which seems prevalent thruout the city school kindergartens, the lack of chairs for use by these youngsters in the rooms. In recent years we have been brought to look upon the kindergarten as the source of initial training for the future years in school. Yet how can a child be expected to establish any association with a classroom while sitting on the floor to draw pictures or indulge in the other occupations familiar to kindergartens? M. LITLE

TRIBUTE TO "GASOLINE ALLEY"

Chicago, April 5—I know I am only one of the thousands who read and enjoy "Gasoline Alley," but I'd like to take this means to say I think it is, without a doubt and without exception, the finest, most human strip of any I have ever read.

It's true to life, true to the times, and, most of all, dear to the hearts of those of us who have grown up with Nina and Skeezix. Thanks a million for this fine strip. MARGIE E. KRAUS

YANKS KILL 8,156 JAPS IN WEEK IN THE PHILIPPINES

205 Captured; Close In on Baguio

MANILA, April 16 [Monday]—(AP)—Further American progress in the reduction of Japanese defenses of Baguio, Philippine summer capital in the mountains of northern Luzon, was announced by Gen. MacArthur today.

"Our columns," the bulletin said, "converge on the city from the south, west, and northwest." Doughboys of Maj. Gen. Percy Clarkson's 33d division were three miles from Baguio on the west and seven miles on the north. Fighting continued along the 30 mile front.

8,156 Japs Die in Week

The bulletin reported 8,156 Japanese were counted dead and 205 taken prisoner in the Philippines in the last week. This brought the total Japanese casualties for the Philippines campaign to 323,000.

In southern Luzon, Americans invaded and cleared Cagararay Island at the entrance to Albay gulf. This further secured the shipping passage to the important harbor of Legaspi.

Hong Kong Bombed Again

American aircraft dropped 387 tons of bombs on Japanese installations at Davao and other Mindanao Island positions.

Continuing their south China sea blockade from the air, Philippine-based bombers struck supply terminals at Hong Kong and in the Canton area, sank a medium freighter in the harbor; hit rail facilities on the French Indo-China coast, and destroyed or damaged seven enemy vessels in the sea lanes.

Other planes raided air centers, rail yards and docks in continuing daily attacks on Formosa. Supply areas at Tawao and Tarakan on the northeast coast of Borneo also were bombed.

ARMY DELAYS OCHS' RELEASE; ASKS DEPOSITION

Military authorities yesterday refused to surrender Pvt. Martin [The Ox] Ochs, sought by Du Page county police on a murder warrant in connection with the gang ride death of Maurice Barad, until a deposition is made explaining the extent to which the soldier is involved in the crime, according to Lee Daniels, Du Page county state's attorney.

Ochs, who is being held in the guardhouse at the Schick General hospital in Clinton, Ia., indicated willingness to be returned here when questioned by Deputy Sheriff Elmer Hoffman last Friday following his surrender. State's Atty. Daniels said statements would be drawn up immediately and forwarded to the commanding general of the 7th service command in Omaha, Neb.

Ochs was named with Paul Labriola, a north side gangster, as the abductors of her husband by Mrs. Florence Barad after the victim was found shot near Bensenville March 29.

This saw is okay, mister, we'll take it!

B-29S RETURN TO SHOWER TOKYO WITH BOMB FIRE

GUAM, April 16 [Monday]—(AP)—American Super Fortresses in very great strength attacked Tokyo with fire bombs for the second time in 48 hours today and also raided the capital's industrial suburb of Kawasaki. Probably as many as 400 B-29's participated.

The mass attack was a repetition of Saturday's incendiary raid on Tokyo, except that new targets were hit. Fire bombs were showered on the southeastern corner of Tokyo, bordered by Tokyo bay on the east and Tama river on the south, one of the principal industrial areas of the city. Returning flyers reported sections of Tokyo still were flaming from the previous raid.

Kawasaki, on Tokyo bay between Tokyo and Yokahama, is the ninth largest city in Japan. It has many war industries and also shares the Tokyo-Yokahama railroads, highways, power system and communications network.

SNIPER SWIMS TO WRECKED SHIP; KILLS AMERICAN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

AN ADVANCE BASE HOSPITAL, April 15—A Jap sniper carrying a small caliber machine gun swam 2½ miles in the night to climb into a hole torn in the hull of an American ship by a Jap suicide plane and, while hiding there, let go a burst which wounded a coast guardsman and killed another man.

The coast guardsman, Seaman 1st Class Magness McClellan, 21 years old, of Tampa, Fla., revealed the incident today. He said that the ship had been lying dead in the sea since before dawn when the flaming suicide plane plunged into her side near the water line. He said Jap swimmers came out to the ship in the manner of jackals after night fell.

McClellan and the other man were hit when they hauled in an embarkation net which they suspected swimmers might use. McClellan said he did not know whether there was more than one Japanese inside the hull. He said an officer from his ship reported that three swimmers were killed in the water in the vicinity the night after he was wounded.

Danes Report Shipload of V-Bombs Sunk by Mine

STOCKHOLM, April 15 (AP)—The Free Danish Press service said tonight that it was rumored the 10,000 ton steamer Hansett struck a mine and sank while carrying V-bombs from Aarhus, Denmark, to Norway. The agency confirmed a report that the Germans were shipping many trainloads of long, cylinderlike objects into Denmark, believed to be V-2 bombs or one-man torpedoes.

Waste paper is a vital weapon of war. There is a critical shortage. Save all your waste paper and help win the war.

They Listen..To Help Win the War

Folks on rationing boards have listened and listened and listened ... Junior uses up all of the family shoe stamps ... Somebody's oil burner is covered with icicles ... Somebody's share-rider moved away. Yes, they've listened with patience and tried to be fair ... to be more than helpful when a genuine case of hardship was brought to their attention.

In teaching us what we can do without, rationing has given us a new appreciation of our country's peacetime abundance. It has taught us more. We have learned lessons in self-denial and the value of cooperation ... lessons that bolster our determination to carry on till final victory is won,

Young and old, we are getting matchless training in early American fortitude and self-reliance. Surely the people of our country will be ready to meet the problems of tomorrow with confidence.

What ration points bring to our tables today would have seemed like banquets to generations of our forefathers—but you have Budweiser, too, to make simple wartime meals taste better.

Dear Sirs:
I'm looking around for my boy. When he comes back out of the army he'll want a place of his own. He's thinking of a small ranch where he could run some cattle-just a few to start. I wouldn't want to close anything till my boy gets back, but I want to start looking around now. Perhaps you know of some elderly people who might want to sell out

"I'm looking around for my boy"

YOU bet we'll help. That's one of the jobs our Agricultural Development Department is organized for. The Milwaukee Road has no farm land to sell but our agricultural agents are familiar with opportunities in the twelve productive Midwest and Northwest States served by this railroad.

Last year, 10,361 home seekers requested our aid in directing them to localities where they could practice the type of farming or ranching desired. We were in a position to give them impartial advice on where they could buy property to suit their needs and finances.

We can and will gladly help you too. Your requests for information will be promptly answered. Address Agricultural and Mineral Development Department, 822 Union Station, Chicago 6, Ill.

SCHENLEY DISTILLERS CORP., NEW YORK

Development

Our reader mail here at Schenley encourages us to continue with a sketch or two on the development of the distilled spirits industry in the early days of the Republic.

We find that from 1790 to 1800, the annual per capita consumption of distilled spirits was far greater than it is today. When 1810 rolled around, the popularity of rum began to wane, while the production and consumption of American whiskey increased. We learn too that during this period, the distilling industry was a great stimulus to other industries. The manufacture of barrels, bottles and earthen jugs took on a new importance.

Previously, whiskey was dispensed directly from the barrel. While barrels were not then considered of great importance in the aging of whiskey, they were necessary for its transportation and storage. Our Congress and a number of state Legislatures took steps to protect and develop these new industries. For instance, a direct governmental bounty was proposed to the native glass industry.

While the discussions were in progress, a prominent bottle manufacturer suffered a severe loss by fire and petitioned Congress for a loan to reconstruct his plant. He said it would enable him to resume the manufacture of an essential commodity. A congressional committee recommended a loan "not exceeding $8,000.00," stating that "an industry so important to the United States deserved help."

Something reminiscent in this. Eleven years ago, when that "ignoble experiment" which we termed "Prohibition" came to an end, a market for millions of bushels of surplus grain, for which there was no market—was provided by the rebirth of an ancient industry. And many new jobs were provided when twelve to fifteen million workers were jobless. Then, when war came, the entire distilling industry was on hand to convert its distilling facilities, almost overnight, to the manufacture of essential alcohol for war purposes.

Yes, the distilling industry in America has an interesting history. Today, it is regulated—by both Federal and State laws. And too, it has its own self-imposed regulations, nonetheless important, and effective. The modern distiller recognizes the social aspects of his business. He requests of the non-user that he be tolerant of the rights of others, and of the user that he be just that—a user—not an abuser.

INCOMES SOAR, RENTS LAG IN PUBLIC HOUSING

Floyd Dana Tells Burden for Taxpayers

Figures of the Chicago housing authority showing that tenants in public projects are enjoying low rentals at taxpayers' expense, even tho their incomes have increased as much as two and a half times the maximum set for eligibility, were cited yesterday as a forceful argument against the Kelly-Green slum clearance and rebuilding legislation.

Floyd G. Dana, who is unopposed for president of the Chicago Real Estate board at the May 2 election, pointed out that public housing was restricted originally to families with yearly incomes between $600 and $1,200. The latest report on rental adjustments by the housing authority shows that 72.2 per cent of tenants have incomes over $1,200 and that a few have reached $3,000. Top rental is $53, which includes heat, light, gas, and refrigeration.

"Disturbing Situation"

"This is a disturbing situation for both landlords and tenants in buildings that must pay their shares of taxes," said Dana. "If we are to go on building more public housing with public money, exempt from taxes, private operators cannot meet such rental competition.

"The public tenants are made a specially favored class. In the same neighborhood are other families with no higher incomes but who are paying higher rent for less desirable quarters. They feel they are entitled to better homes, too, but we can't provide them with a program that eliminates taxpaying property.

"If private industry is given the chance, it can provide housing for all except the lowest income groups. They must be taken care of as a matter of welfare. Each family could be given a rent certificate to meet its needs. There is a great difference between caring for destitute families in that manner and the building of projects by public subsidy for the benefit of families that should be paying rents on the same economic scale that other families do."

Table of 5,727 Families

The housing authority's table showing 5,727 families in the public projects, grouped according to incomes and rents, follows:

Income—	Rent.	No. of families	Pct. of total.
$ 000-$ 900	$15-$15	855	14.9
901- 1,200	20- 23	737	12.9
1,201- 1,500	25- 28	893	15.6
1,501- 1,800	30- 33	1,161	20.3
1,801- 2,100	35- 38	1,418	24.8
2,101- 2,400	40- 43	357	6.2
2,401- 2,700	45- 48	252	4.4
2,701- 3,000	50- 53	54	0.9

The situation was attributed by the housing authority to the general rise in war time incomes and the housing shortage. Tenants cannot be put out when their incomes exceed the maximum, as was done formerly, because, it was said, there is no place for them to move.

"Pig in Poke" Hit

Dana also objected to the "pig in a poke" feature of the Kelly-Green program, which calls for a 5 million dollar Chicago bond issue and a 5 million dollar state appropriation, but fails to specify where the money, and possibly further subsidies, are to be used. He said the Illinois bills, carrying provisions for tax exemption, appeared to be part of a nation-wide enthusiasm inspired by public housers.

Forty-three other states have similar legislation under consideration, he said.

"Ah, how satisfying it must be to spend one's days bringing such beauty to the world!"

2 AUTOMOBILES KILL WOMAN AS SHE LEAVES CAR

Mrs. Mabel Dougherty, 52, of 1409 W. 72d st., a widow, was killed last night when she was struck by two automibles after she and her daughter, Grace, got off a street car at 72d st. and Racine av. Miss Dougherty dodged both cars. The drivers, Floyd Neckrosh, 40, of 8046 Artesian av., and Emil Stusek, 30, of 7550 Parnell av., were held.

Floyd Kladaugh, 35, of 6419 S. Marshfield av., was arrested last night for questioning in connection with the injury of Mrs. Miriam Hyland, 65, of 7325 Calumet av., by a hit and run driver at 68th st. and Ashland av., Friday. Kladaugh's automobile was found abandoned yesterday at 66th st. and Damen av. One headlight was smashed.

ILLINOIS LEGION SUGGESTS DELAY FOR BONUS BILLS

Delay in consideration of a state bonus for World War II. veterans until they return and express their own wishes was recommended by the executive committee of the Illinois department of the American Legion yesterday. Six bonus bills are pending in the legislature.

Ending a two-day meeting in Hotel Sherman, the executive committee acted on a score of other proposals, including indorsement of a $50 a month pension for veterans of World War I., payable at the age of 50. Another resolution expressed confidence in President Truman "as a veteran and a Legionnaire."

Support for National Comdr. Scheiberling in his opposition to the commissioning of Communists in the army and navy was pledged. The committee also approved resolutions supporting universal compulsory military service and indorsing a 14 million dollar program for tuberculosis sanitariums in Illinos.

CIVIL AIR PATROL GIVES SHOW TO SPUR RECRUITING

Demonstrations of acrobatic flying, formation flying, package dropping by parachute and message pickup were given yesterday by members of squadron 613-3 of the Civil Air patrol at Prosperi airport, Tinley Park, as part of a campaign to recruit 15,000 cadets in Illinois. A similar show will be staged April 29 at Rubinkam airport, Harvey.

The CAP seeks as cadets boys and girls from 15 to 18 for training in aviation and military subjects under the general supervision of adult CAP squadrons. The program will extend into peace time and will, meanwhile, prepare the cadets for enlistment in the air forces.

Each summer a group of cadets goes to an army air base for two weeks of intensive training, work on airplanes, and familiarization with army life. Applications for membership in the corps should be sent to Capt. J. E. Day at Camp Sauganash, 4500 Foster av.

That life may go on...

IT IS SPRING in Italy. From two mountaintops Allied and Nazi artillery are dueling.

Far down in the valley, a plowman and his patient oxen plod imperturbably under the shells passing overhead, turning the brown earth in a furrow. He is old—long since arrived at the age of honorable retirement when a man should sit in the sun with his pipe and glass of wine. But his sons and grandsons are gone from the village, swallowed up by the war.

The season has come when the earth must be opened up for planting—for the begetting of another generation of crops. In war or peace, this cannot wait. Men must eat to live, and it is God's will that life should go on.

It was the same in Normandy. While armor clanked along the highways and infantrymen with Tommy guns flushed Nazi snipers from the hedgerows, the Norman farmers, calm and stubborn as the soil itself, tended their fields and performed the ancient ritual of farm chores.

Whether he practices the simple agriculture of the European countryman or the highly mechanized methods of modern American farming, the farmer symbolizes the continuity of life in war or peace.

International Harvester, known wherever soil is tilled, serves the farmer in war or peace.

ROOMING HOUSE FIRE KILLS TWO; FIVE ARE HURT

Hangar, 8 Planes Burn in Harlem Airport Blaze

Two men were killed and five others were burned or injured when fire swept a three story rooming house at 1711 Monroe st. yesterday. John Fried, 2256 Warren blvd., operator of the house, and George F. Moser, 73, caretaker, were arrested by Warren av. police for questioning about violation of fire ordinances. They said Friel had installed bars on rear bedroom windows which prevented the occupants from jumping, and that the rear doors were locked.

Acting Fire Chief John Enright of the 6th battalion said the blaze apparently was caused by a carelessly tossed cigaret. He estimated damage at $5,000. One victim, Stanley Gunea, 58, carried out $3,300 in bills with him.

All 22 Roomers Are Men

One dead man was identified from a social security card as Hugo Richter, about 50. He was found suffocated and burned in his room on the third floor. There were 22 roomers in the building, all men, police said. The fire started about 10 a. m.

The other victim, who died of burns in County hospital, was unidentified. He was found on the second floor.

Other victims include Frank Riley, 50, third degree burns; Louis Schmidt, 68, second degree burns; Edward Enright, 58, overcome by smoke; Louis Jarmer, 50, fractured right leg and facial burns, and Gunea, who was overcome.

Bars on Rear Room

Police said Jarmer, trapped on the third floor, jumped out his bedroom window, plunging down a narrow areaway between buildings. Michael Vidmer, 42, a war plant maintenance man, said he was unable to get out the barred window of his room and also found the third floor stairway barred by smoke and flames. He escaped unharmed by dropping to a second story roof from the third floor bathroom.

Big Hangar Destroyed

Fire destroyed one large, four-section hangar and eight private airplanes yesterday afternoon at the Harlem airport, 87th st. and Harlem av., causing damage estimated by Fred Schumacher, airport manager, at $20,000. Schumacher said the blaze started about 3 p. m. when a workman dropped an electric bulb, shattering it and igniting gasoline and grease. Fire departments from Oaklawn, Summit, Blue Island, Columbus Manor, Grandview, and Bedford Park fought the blaze.

The building destroyed was the No. 3 hangar and housed 45 airplanes. Only the eight planes inside it were harmed. Four other hangars at the airport were not damaged.

A 5-11 alarm yesterday brought 45 pieces of apparatus to St. Casimir's old school, 2222 S. Whipple st., where flames broke out in the tall wooden roof and steeple. Hundreds of spectators watched while firemen kept the blaze confined to the roof. There was no one in the building.

Mother, 3 Children Rescued

Mrs. William Borini, 29, wife of a soldier, and her three young children were rescued from their home at 4144 Southport av. by a police squad after the youngest child, William Jr., 2, started a fire. Policemen William Nolan, Joseph Niewinski, and Frank Mudloff of Town Hall station saw a burning curtain in the Borini apartment and aroused Mrs. Borini and two of the children, Adele, 8, and Roger, 5, asleep in a rear bedroom. William was found groping about the smoke filled living room.

Spring Moving Day Becomes War Casualty

BY JUDITH CASS

THE housing shortage, the scarcity of moving facilities, and the long waiting lines for the services of decorators will do away this year with the fanfare which usually accompanies the traditional spring moving day, May 1. Those Chicagoans who succeed in obtaining new quarters no longer wait for the customary spring exchange, but are grateful to move whenever war time complications will permit.

Mr. and Mrs. John K. Notz are getting settled in the Winnetka home which they recently bought from Mrs. William O. Green, who has moved into Chicago. The Notzs' former home in Winnetka has been sold to Mr. and Mrs. George Doty Jr. of Barrington.

The Paul W. Olivers have bought the Alfred Brittain house in Ridge av., Winnetka, into which they moved recently from the Winnetka house they had been renting in Elm st. The Howard Buhses now are occupying the Elm st. house. Mr. and Mrs. Brittain have gone east to live.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Hampton Monroe have moved into the home in Lake Forest which they bought from Mrs. Alexander Babcock.

Young Prudence Platt has a new nursery in which to play, for her parents, the junior Henry R. Platts, have moved into the house which they have bought in Sheridan rd., Evanston.

Mrs. Nelson L. Barnes Jr., who returned recently from a six week stay with Lt. Barnes in California, where he is awaiting orders for sea duty, has moved to a new Lake Forest address.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth C. McKeown and their two children have left for Chattanooga, Tenn., where Mr. McKeown is now in business. They have bought a home on Lookout mountain.

Now that Joseph C. Belden Jr. has been released from the navy, he and Mrs. Belden will be moving into their Lake Forest home as soon as it is vacated by the Owen Wests, which will be about the first of May. Mr. Belden, who arrived in Lake Forest a few weeks ago, is staying with his mother-in-law, Mrs. Albert Brace Pattou. He will be joined shortly by his wife and mother, as soon as they can obtain reservations from Florida.

On the Calendar

A number of charitable events are on today's calendar, among them the annual spring benefit luncheon and card party of the Mary Crane league at 12:30 p. m. in the Edgewater Beach hotel. Mrs. H. Scott Kingwill is chairman of the benefit, with Mrs. Jack C. Hand as co-chairman. During the afternoon Florence Bourke Ellis will give a book review.

Circle 5 of the Oak Park and River Forest center of the Infant Welfare society will benefit from the sale of more than 1,000 tickets to tonight's performance of "One Touch of Venus" in the Civic Opera House. Members of Circle Thirteen, the most recently founded of the center's branches, will attend in a group, and also present will be officers and members of other branches. Mrs. George T. Hall is president of Circle 5.

Beginning today and continuing thru the week, members of the Illinois Opera guild will give a series of card parties to raise money for the guild's work. Two special projects of the guild are the maintenance of its music room in the hospital at Great Lakes, and the supplying of opera tickets to service men and women. Score cards from the various parties will be turned in at a meeting on April 25 in the Arts club.

Members of Circulo Cervantes and their guests will meet for dinner at 6:30 o'clock tonight in the Yar restaurant. The guest speaker will be Senora Mercedes de Ramos of Caracas, Venezuela.

The annual spring meeting of the parents association of the Francis W. Parker school will be held at a tea instead of the usual luncheon tomorrow in the school. The speaker will be Richard P. McKeon, dean of the division of the humanities at the University of Chicago.

Weddings Announced

Miss Browne Is Married to K. H. Straus

Dozens of white candles and bouquets of white stock and snapdragons decorated the chapel of St. James' church for the marriage at 4:30 p. m. on Saturday of Miss Elizabeth Browne and Pvt. Kenneth Hollister Straus, of the army, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack I. Straus of New York. The pretty young bride wore a square necked, tight bodiced gown of white satin and a fingertip length tulle veil. The lace in her cap came from the wedding costume of her sister-in-law, Mrs. Browne Jr., and she carried a bouquet of white orchids and stephanotis.

Miss Patricia Straus, sister of the bridegroom and the bride's only attendant, wore a frock of periwinkle blue taffeta, made also with a square neckline, and carried yellow roses. Her hat was a wide brimmed one of natural colored leghorn straw with a blue ribbon streamer. Mr. Straus was his son's best man, and ushering were the bridegroom's uncle, Dr. Robert Levy, and A. L. Bienstock of New York and the bride's cousin, Tilden Cummings of Chicago. The Rev. Duncan H. Browne read the wedding service.

Only relatives were present at the ceremony and the reception following in the Lake Shore dr. apartment of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Aldis J. Browne. Mrs. Browne received in an attractive floor length gown of gray crepe and a smart little hat of white trimmed with blue veiling. The bridegroom's mother's wedding costume was a biege floor length gown, cut on distinguished lines, and an attractive flowered hat.

Among the members of the immediate family who were present were the bridegroom's grandmothers, Mrs. Frederick K. Hollister and Mrs. Jesse I. Straus, both of New York. The late Jesse Straus was United States Ambassador to France. Pfc. Straus and his bride have left on a wedding trip.

Marian Anderson Begins Her Opera House Recital With Memorial "Ave Maria"

Perhaps yesterday's recital was the most difficult Marian Anderson has had to sing. When she came on the Opera house stage her face was a gray mask for all the green and silver beauty of her gown, and her eyes had the burned out look of grief. It was not until the end of the concert, in the encored "No Hidin' Place Down There," that gayety came from within, and the effort to produce it ceased to suggest a grimace. But she made no grandiloquent gestures. She merely began with the song usually her benediction, Schubert's "Ave Maria," and she dedicated it quietly to President Roosevelt.

Yet the strain under which she was singing set the character of the concert. She began huskily, and the great aria from the St. John Passion lacked the compassionate glory that lies in her finest performance. It missed, too, the orchestral support that matches her voice with the noble cello. Even with a bandaged finger Franz Rupp is a devoted accompanist, but the piano is not equal to Bach's intention in "It is fulfilled."

As the concert proceeded Miss Anderson sang with increasing beauty of the wonderful tone that is her birthright, but until she reached Schumann's "Stille Tränen," she was outside the songs and detached, as if, far off, her mind wandered in some dark dream. I'm not sure whether "Stille Tränen" woke her from that dream or wrapped the rest of us in its sabled sorrow, but I do know that for the first time that afternoon, she and her audience were together. Her version was no dutiful echo of the lieder tradition, but a poignant song sung as it made sense to the singer, from the heart.

After this something extraordinary happened. Miss Anderson invaded French opera in the grand style, and won. She sang the heroic recitative and aria, "Lowly child of the fields," from Halevy's "Charles VI," and it was a glowing performance, brilliant, poised and focused in the grand manner.

But I never was one who wanted Miss Anderson to desert recital for opera, tho it is a fine thing to know she has conquered that bravura design for singing. It was good to know she could slip back into the serene simplicity of Christopher Thomas' gentle Irish song of the Nativity, "O, Men from the Fields," and to be reminded that when she sings "Crucifixion" that gaunt whisper of voice is worth its weight in cadenzas spun of solid vocal gold.

Notes

"The Du Barry," with Marita Farell and Michael Bartlett, opens a summer of operetta at the Opera house May 12, in collaboration with the Shuberts. Chicagoans will be used for chorus and ballet . . . "Othello" has two Erlanger performances to make up from Saturday's cancellations, and two extra shows have been added. Evening subscribers will be taken care of next Sunday at 8:15, and matinee subscribers Sunday, April 29, at 2:15 . . . The Opera house boxoffice opens today for the week of Metropolitan Opera, starting April 30 with a sold out "Lucia." The mail order decks are cleared, and the clearing took 60 per cent of the whole week's capacity, with many orders returned for lack of enough low priced seats.

Dance Recital Is Too Much of a Good Thing

BY ALBERT GOLDBERG

Dance recitals by small groups have numerous problems peculiar to themselves. The program presented at the Eighth Street theater yesterday afternoon by José Limón, Beatrice Seckler and Dorothy Bird, under the auspices of the Chicago Dance council, had moments of interest and occasionally of tension, but could not avoid monotony both of invention and execution.

Mr. Limón was not only the star, he was also the choreographer and the constant center of focus. He is a gifted and an imaginative dancer, with a greater sense of pose and posture than of fluid movement. A certain heaviness, both of body and of mood, at times gives his work an oppressive monotony, particularly, as was frequent in the dances on yesterday's program, when the emotion verges on the anguished.

Mr. Limon's interpretation of Bach's Chaconne we unfortunately missed, but there was another long solo in "Danzas Mexicanas," a series of pictures of the Mexican Indian, with sociological overtones. Some of this material lent itself well to choreographic expression, as in the Indian and revolutionary sequences, but the rest was more puzzling than enlightening.

Of the three group dances, done with Miss Seckler and Miss Bird—good but not outstanding dancers in this style—we caught only the polyphonic finale of Vivaldi's Concerto Grosso, which appeared to be not much different from many another handling of the same idea. "Eden Tree," a first performance, as was the Vivaldi, portrayed at considerable length the eternal triangle of Adam, Eve, and Lilith, with emphasis on the turmoil of domestic discord rather than on the possible delights of unfaithfulness. The closing "Western Dances," in which the three dancers recited cowboy songs and mountain ballads, was pleasant as long as it adhered to the "Rodeo". "Oklahoma" pattern, but sometimes wandered into far fields.

Two young musicians, Adelle Druktenis, soprano, and Franz Benteler, violinist, exhibited their talents before a large audience at Kimball hall yesterday afternoon. Miss Druktenis has the promise of a useful colorature voice, tho it must have greater volume and more assured production before it can cope distinctively with "Ah, fors' e lui," from "La Traviata." Handel's "Care selve," on the other hand, had a pleasant innocence and serenity. Mr. Benteler was heard, with Maryland D'Auguero at the piano, in the first movement of Richard Strauss' sonata, which he read in a musicianly manner but with a tone much too small for effective concert purposes.

Dr. Ram Will Address Business Woman's Club

The Business Woman's club of Fourth Presbyterian church will have Dr. Augustine Ralla Ram, general secretary of the Student Christian Movement in India, Burma and Ceylon, as guest speaker at a meeting tomorrow night in the church. There will be dinner at 6 o'clock, and Dr. Vartan Melconian will continue his discussion series on "The Expansion of Christianity" with a talk on "The Gospel for All Man—A Universal Message and Mission."

White Collar GIRL

BY RUTH MAC KAY

The Length of Your Shadow

"Your personality is the length of the shadow you will cast in your career," begins Esther Eberstadt Brooke in an interesting pamphlet called "60 Easy Ways to Improve Your Personality." Out of her considerable experience interviewing job seekers—and employers—Mrs. Brooke counsels: "Your care in watching the details of your appearance, your attitude and your manners will be richly rewarded by the self-confidence you will enjoy in everyday life."

On the subject of clothes for the business girl, Mrs. Brooke makes these suggestions:

"Your dress should express your individuality becomingly. In an office it should be conservative, trim, 'undated.' Last year's dress, if becoming, is far more appropriate than the latest style if it be a dramatic new departure. Use more taste and judgment than frills and froufrous.

"Choose grays, blues, browns, black, inconspicuous prints, for office wear. Keep an eye out for line and refinement of design. Choose the simple, clever things, and you'll be right.

"For office wear avoid rolled stockings, too short skirts, and the easy sport clothes that were all right in the classroom. Don't try to keep that schoolgirl complex forever.

"Wear pumps or oxfords—not open toes or fancy cut shoes.

"Don't come to the office dressed for your evening date. It looks out of place all day and you won't look fresh in it by evening, anyway. Wrap it up and change after hours when you can spruce up."

Feminine Firsts

The first woman granted the title of office manager by the New York Stock exchange was Kathleen De Vere Taylor. . . . The first woman elected to the New York City council was Genevieve Earle, minority leader. . . . Was Frances Hurd Clark the first woman metallurgist employed by the Western Union Telegraph company? . . . And, did any woman organize her own company for conducting market surveys before Pauline Arnold, in St. Louis, in 1926? She opened her Chicago office the fateful year of '29. . . . Columbia's first woman news commentator was Kathryn Cravens who was commissioned an admiral of the flagship fleet because she traveled 100,000 miles by air reporting various events.

Sleek Black Dresses Are Dramatic Hit

BY REA SEEGER

Very sleek and definitely urban dull black dresses are deceptively simple at first glance but they are the last word in sophisticated elegance, even tho most of the sleeves are mere shadows in effect. The smart models fit as smoothly as plaster. The slim skirts have enough expertly placed shirred fullness to assure freedom and animation when walking. They are simple basic dresses with which to dramatize exciting new costume accessories, but they are far more complicated than the sheath dresses of last season.

Some of the dresses are frankly sleeveless, with the elongation of the sholders forming a suggestion of cap sleeves. The extra material thus saved is used for bows, to which panels are shirred, made of the same material as the bodice. Side drapery, clever new back fullness in pert short peplums, and simulated bustles are other features. Many are beltless in front, with a suave form revealing princess line. A half belt holds the fullness of the bustle or the peplum.

Sheer yokes are new, deep square outlines—sometimes with the entire yoke of black sheer, subtly contrasted with a scalloped outline of the dull crepe of the bodice where the dress and yoke merge. Black net, black lace, and chiffon are used with finesse to make these seductive and revealing deep yoke lines. Lace edging to a skirt, or inset belts of lace or sheer, bows of lace of filmy net, all of black, add effective contrasts to these very new and dramatic first summer "blacks."

'Shulamith' Is Naive, but It's Tuneful, Too

"Shulamith," Abraham Goldfaden's Yiddish operetta now at the Civic theater, is a cross between grand opera in the biblical style and musical comedy, having borrowed some of the bad habits of both. But it has a tuneful score lustily sung and is said to have been a favorite in the Yiddish repertory for a long time. Probably contemporary audiences enjoy it doubly for its naivete, for not every night in the week do you encounter a stuffed wildcat with leering green eyes, and an Ethiopian slave in black tights and shredded wheat, whose antics blend Yiddish comedy, Indian dances and war whoops and the demeanor of an end man in a minstrel show.

Fortunately for the uninitiate, the plot is simplicity itself. A wandering nobleman of operatic gesture and robust tenor pulls Shulamith, a lyric soprano, out of a well in which she got stuck trying to get a drink. They fall in love and call on the well and the wildcat to witness their betrothal. But the nobleman is a forgetful fellow. He goes away and marries a plump princess with golden sausage curls. After their first child is eaten by a wildcat and their second drowned in a well, he remembers Shulamith and goes back to her amid great rejoicing.

On a stage rigged up with some fancy regalia indeed, Leon Gold sings the stentorian but absent minded wooer, and Lily Lilliana the tenacious maiden. A little confused by it all, the Berenice Holmes ballet wears abbreviated Grecian tunics while indulging in what seem to be faintly Egyptian postures.—C. C.

JOURNEY UNDERGROUND

(The story of a Chicago hero's escape from German occupied France)

(Copyright: 1945: By The Chicago Tribune.) By Flight Officer David G. Prosser

INSTALMENT XLIV.

It was a thrilling moment when we started to move out of the station. The hour of our liberation was for the first time positively close. There was no chance to turn back and return to the Maurices. We were on our way, and only misfortune could stop us.

Occasionally I moved the blackout curtain to look at the suburbs fleeing by. The night was dark, and all I could see were cracks of light coming from the many poorly blacked out windows. After an hour had passed, we were in the countryside. There the rain clouds were clearing, and from time to time the full moon shone thru, lighting up the fields and small villages.

Not long afterward our train pulled into the station at Orleans, the stop at which the German military police were to inspect our papers. As the time for the inspection approached I became more and more anxious. After the other passengers had left we sat in suspense for over half an hour. I began to hope that perhaps there would be no check on papers after all, but at the same time imagined the inspectors were being particularly efficient and careful which was causing our delay. Confidence, despair, hope, pessimism, suspense, calm, fear, intrepidity, and many other emotions whirled around in my head.

At long last we heard some activity in the corridor of our carriage, and altho the same thoughts still ran thru my mind, I did feel relieved that the waiting was coming to an end. In two or three minutes a tremendous German Wehrmacht officer opened the door to our compartment and pleasantly requested, "Vos papiers, s'il vous plait." [Your papers, please.]

Standing in the doorway, he appeared to be one of the tallest men I had ever seen. His peaked hat reached two or three inches above the door, and his body completely filled it. He was not fat, but very well proportioned, he gave one the impression of being one of the true Herrenvolk of the Wehrmacht.

After he had spoken, he quickly disappeared in the direction of the compartment occupied by Herk and the captain. We sat in suspense for many minutes waiting for him to return. Finally Mac became impatient and went out into the passageway to investigate the matter. He returned to say that the German had gone. When the civil servant's wife heard this, she said, "Tant pis." [So much the worse.] That seemed to be the extreme of sympathizing with the law of Vichy, and I became even more suspicious of her than I had been before. The workman corrected her by saying, "Tant mieux." [So much the better.] She made no reply, and silence again fell in our compartment.

This sudden disappearance of the officer seemed unnatural to me, and I still felt uneasy. I vaguely wondered if he had taken Herk to the station for a special interrogation, and thought that perhaps the captain had at last been caught. These last conjectures turned out to be incorrect, but I was right in thinking that the German might return for within a few minutes he was back ready to start his inspection. He appeared to be in a hurry, and quickly made a superficial examination of all papers.

He stopped before me to take two glances at the identity card photograph, carefully making a comparison between it and myself. Looking at him more closely, I thought he appeared to be the paragon of Prussianism.

Despite his militarism, there was something about him that made me feel at ease rather than afraid. I had thought that my hand would tremble so much that I would find difficulty in holding my identity card steady enough for him to read, but on the contrary, I had complete control over myself and showed no tendency to tremble. When the officer left, he said pleasantly, "Bon soir," but no one replied, not even the woman who had appeared disappointed when it looked as if he were not going to look at our papers.

Soon after he departed the train started, and once more we were rapidly speeding toward the south. We passed thru most of the small way stations and only stopped at Vierzon, Chateaureu, Argenton, and for some time at Limoges. I was unable to sleep all the night. Most of the people with us dozed off soon after we left Orleans. Mac slept, or just closed his eyes from time to time. Already I felt him to be a good friend, and it seemed odd not to be able to speak to him except upon two occasions when we happened to go out to the W. C. at the same time.

As I passed Herk's compartment, I saw that he and the others with him were asleep.

In the guide's compartment there seemed to be two or three young men I had not seen before, but I was not sure that they were all in our own group.

At Limoges we had a long stop. The weather had become cold, so I walked up and down the passageway to try to keep warm. The guide came out to join me, and asked how I was enjoying the trip. She did not expect my enthusiastic praise of the beautiful countryside, for she was most concerned with the cold. She made the trip so often that the scenery was dull and monotonous to her. She said we would be in Toulouse about 10 o'clock in the morning, and would have several hours' rest there and enough time for a good meal.

Altho the temptation to drink a little of my precious cognac was very strong, I had resolved not to touch it before I had gone well into the mountains, for it was there that I thought I would need it the most. Our guide's statement about a good meal gave me visions of being taken to the home of some patriot where we could have the opportunity to wash as well as eat.

We looked at the dimly lighted station of Limoges for a few minutes, and then went back to our compartment.

Almost immediately the train started to move. Again I looked out of the blacked out window and gazed at the moonlit French countryside. We went thru the towns of Brive, Cahors, and finally reached Montauban.

This country was more mountainous than the northern sector and it seemed less populous. One did not see so many little farm houses, villages seemed smaller, and much of the land less cultivated.

About the time we were coming into Montauban, the people who had sat between us and the workman and civil servant's wife left, and two farmer boys took their places. They were a dirty unkempt pair. The one facing me looked stupid, and the few things he said that I could understand were simple and unintelligent. He had a suitcase that looked as if it had belonged to some ancestor in the Napoleonic wars.

He seemed to be staring at me, and altho I tried not to look at him, I found myself constantly catching his eye. There was something rather compelling about him that always led my eyes back to his face. His complexion was disgusting, and his green eyes, sandy hair, and small mouth, which was usually open, made an unpleasant sight. Perhaps, if he had not been looking at me, I would not have glanced in his direction so often, but I could feel his bovine eyes upon me all the time. I almost became suspicious of him, thinking he was the most efficient Gestapo agent shrewdly disguised. Finally I went out into the aisle for a while to escape his gaze.

Mac was out there, and we stood together for a long time smoking, but not daring to mutter more than a few words. The dawn had just broken, and the sky to the east was completely filled with color. Mac said he had had a very bad night and only got a couple of hours' sleep. That was considerably better than I had done, for I had never even dozed since we left Paris.

We went back into the compartment to have something to eat, as we thought it would be best to finish our packages before leaving the train. When I entered the compartment, I saw that the farm boy had taken my place by the window, which faced forward. I was infuriated, for the only remaining places were those with the back to the engine. Riding backward always makes me feel rather ill, and I was very inclined to make a protest, but I did not dare say a word for fear of exposing my accent to my fellow travelers.

The black-out curtain was up now, and I could look at central France by daylight.

People on farms were beginning to stir. Cows were being driven to the barns to be milked, horses were harnessed for the day's work, and the chickens were out in their yards scratching for their early breakfasts.

The towns awoke later than the farms, but soon smoke started to rise from the clusters of houses where people were preparing breakfast.

At Montauban, the woman of whom I had been so suspicious left the train, much to my relief. It was 9 o'clock when we pulled out. However, this last part of the trip was slow. Between Montauban and Toulouse we lost more than an hour. We all became rather impatient, after having had such an uncomfortable night in the train. The more time dragged on, the more I dreamed about the short stay we would have in Toulouse.

I continually forgot that we were not touring the country for pleasure, and I had great expectations of being met by some one at the station who would lavishly entertain us until our next train departed.

The Inquiring Camera Girl

BY MARYON ZYLSTRA

[The Tribune will pay $5 for each interesting question submitted by a reader and used by The Tribune. Today's question was submitted by H. B. Gleason, 46 Main st., Aurora.]

THE QUESTION

What did grandmother have when she was a girl that girls of today would do well to copy?

WHERE ASKED

Michigan Square building, 540 N. Michigan av.

THE ANSWERS

Mary Louise Day, sales person, 660 N. Dearborn st.—Marriage was more serious in grandmother's time than it is now. Too many girls don't give it enough thought in these times because they think nothing of a divorce. I think girls today should learn more about cooking and sewing so that they'll be better homemakers.

Mrs. Dorothy Speck, sales person, 629 Deming pl.—Grandmother had poise and dignity. The girls of today have concentrated too much on being sophisticated and bored looking. The sweetness and sincerity that grandmother had was real beauty. Girls today strive so hard to be popular that they forget what true love is.

Philip Cane, publicist, Croydon hotel—Grandmother had charm tempered by good taste. She was demure and yet had her own way of getting what she wanted. The girls of today are a little too obvious in their attentions toward men—all the men. They aren't interested in just one man and that's where they fall short.

John Ronan, advertising sales, 4622 Grove st., Skokie—Once grandmother made her decision regarding a husband, it was final. She was satisfied that she'd made the right choice. In other things, too, she knew what she wanted and concentrated on getting it. She was more settled, serious, and contented than granddaughter.

Floyd Parrack, advertising sales, 3269 W. Maypole av.—The girls of today would do well to copy grandmother's virtue, attend church more often, and be more religious. Then, too, the cooking isn't terribly important as far as winning a man's heart is concerned, good meals help to make a house a home and keep a family healthy.

Derelle Childs, secretary, 5220 Kenwood av.—I believe that one of the factors in the breakdown of so many families is the fact that women of today aren't stable. They're never satisfied. They don't realize any more what they want. They haven't the patience and endurance and mental stability that grandmother had.

Resolve to Be a Real Friend to the Children

[Copyright: 1945: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

Your baby is little, we'll say. He can't walk or talk, he's just a bundle of energy, greeting you with a smile and madly kicking feet when you come into the room, and is developing a personality of his own at an amazing speed. Or perhaps your little girl is at the delectable stage of talking in her own lingo, taking the whole world as her friend, and so, captivating it with her unconscious wiles. Or maybe your son is 8, or your daughter just growing into her feminine teens.

When—have you decided?—is the time for you to take the time and the trouble, to care enough to become close real friends with your child, to establish a relationship that will not only enrich his life now, but will have deep meaning forevermore?

What you are to your children is something that colors their whole lives, enriches or impoverishes their emotional existence. It is never too early to begin to be their loving, understanding friend.

I know some young persons who have never been close to their parents, and who now, in their maturity, realize what they have missed. I know others who have experienced a close, happy relationship to the full. Both of these are resolved to give [and so receive] the full measure of love and understanding to their own children, the first, because they don't want their children to miss what they have missed, the others, because they don't want their children to miss what they have had.

Chicago Y. W. C. A.'s Select Candidates for National Board

The Chicago Young Women's Christian association, with units from Northwestern university and the University of Chicago, met Saturday in the loop center Y. W. C. A., 59 E. Monroe st., to name candidates for the national board and to formulate recommendations to that body. The session was one of 1,006 held thruout the nation instead of the triennial convention.

Under the chairmanship of Miss Helen P. Bull, head of the Chicago association, delegates to the session proposed Mrs. Charles W. Gilkey and Miss Lilace Reid Barnes for re-election to the national board, and Mrs. Howard Goodman and Mrs. Ernest Johnson as new members.

It was recommended that the national board adopt well defined personnel policies and that the Y. W. C. A. continue to give aid in foreign countries. The Chicago unit further urged that women from all economic, racial, occupational, nationality, and cultural groups be included in membership of the local and national organizations.

Luncheons, Teas to Honor Argentine Woman Educator

Dr. Angela Santa Cruz, South American educator and president of the Buenos Aires Young Women's Christian association, will arrive here tomorrow as a guest of the Chicago Y. W. C. A. Because the association's student work is chief among her interests, the student department will give a tea for her Wednesday in the home of Dr. and Mrs. Arthur Compton, 5759 Kenwood av.

On Thursday she will attend a luncheon in Calvert house, the Catholic student center at the University of Chicago, and on Friday, Miss Helen P. Bull, president of the Chicago Y. W. C. A., will entertain at luncheon for Dr. Santa Cruz in the Fine Arts building.

The Pan-American council is planning a tea for her at 3:30 p. m. Saturday in the Woodrow Wilson room, 84 E. Randolph st.

ANSWERS TO SATURDAY'S QUIZ.

Q. 1—As South you hold:

♠ Q J 10 8 7 ♥ 9 ♦ 6 4 2 ♣ Q 6 4 3

The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
Pass	1 club	Double	Pass
1 spade	Pass	2 hearts	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Two spades. This on the surface may appear to be bidding twice with very little values. However, a different attitude should be adopted by the partner of a doubler, to whom considerable latitude is allowed. Your hand will be a worthless dummy for hearts, whereas your partner's hand is bound to be a good dummy for you. In view of his takeout double he surely has something in spades, possibly three to an honor but he declined to raise the spade bid which was forced. In view of your previous pass and minimum response partner cannot accuse you of having a good hand.

Q. 2—As South you hold:

♠ 10 ♥ Q 6 2 ♦ K Q 4 ♣ K J 9 6 5 2

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South

What do you bid?

A.—At least five clubs and preferably six. It counts up. Partner has at least five and one-half honor tricks and you have two. Seven and one-half honor tricks and a six card suit should produce a slam. You'll find it difficult to allot five and one-half honor tricks to partner on this hand without assigning him three aces.

Q. 3—Your side is vulnerable and as South you hold:

♠ A J 3 ♥ K Q 2 ♦ A K 9 ♣ Q J 10 6

The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
3 spades	Double	Pass	?

What do you bid?

A.—Four spades. The only high cards out against your hand are the ace-king of clubs and the ace of hearts, all of which partner most surely has. This is merely a question of six or seven depending on partner's suit. This is the way to make him show his suit.

Q. 4—As South you hold:

♠ 7 ♥ K Q 9 6 4 ♦ K 9 6 5 ♣ K 6 2

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 club	Pass	1 heart	Pass
3 hearts	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Make a slam try in accordance with whatever system you happen to be playing. When you promote the king of clubs by reason of partner's bid your hand is the equal of an opening bid and partner has opened and jumped. This hand is suitable for Blackwood. If partner has three aces you might take your chances on a slam. In the direct method the proper call is four clubs. If partner shows no enthusiasm you give up at four hearts. If he bids four diamonds denoting the ace, the singleton spade becomes the deciding factor and you should set sail.

Q. 5.—Partner opens with one no trump and you hold:

♠ 10 4 ♥ Q 10 5 ♦ 4 9 3 ♣ A J 9 6 3

What is your response?

A.—Three no trump. Don't make the mistake of bidding two clubs, the a jump to three clubs might be accepted. The enemy should not be given any assistance in the selection of the opening lead. Slam aspirations should not be seriously entertained. Partner should have a maximum of four plus tricks and that gives the partnership at most a little over six and one-half tricks which is not enough.

Q. 6—As South you hold:

♠ A Q 9 ♥ A K 5 2 ♦ A K 6 4 ♣ K 9

The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 heart	Pass	4 hearts	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Six hearts. It is true that partner has not much in the way of honor strength, but he has plenty of trumps and distribution which is just what you need. There is no scientific way to cope with a problem like this.

Q. 7—As South you hold:

♠ Q 7 6 4 ♥ Q ♦ Q 7 5 4 ♣ 9 7 6 5

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 spade	2 hearts	Pass	Pass
Double	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Three spades. This cannot be misunderstood by partner, since you refused to raise to two spades previously. It just states that you had almost a raise and despite your pass your hand has some merit, chiefly distributional.

Q. 8—As South you hold:

♠ 5 4 3 2 ♥ A 10 6 ♦ 9 5 2 ♣ A Q J

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 club	Pass	2 clubs	Pass
3 clubs	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Three no trump. It is reasonable to assume that partner has six clubs, since in his desire to move forward he was unable to show any other suit. You ought to be able to pick up two more tricks in the other suits. It is extremely unlikely that any one could run a five card suit against you.

Carrots are plentiful, full of vitamins, and add color and interest to a meal in almost any form in which they are used. Here's an unusually good carrot ring which may also be baked as a loaf, or in individual custard cups.

Carrot Ring with Almonds

[Serves eight.]

- 2½ cups grated raw carrots
- 2 eggs
- 1 cup evaporated milk
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon sugar
- Pepper
- ½ cup blanched almonds
- 1½ tablespoons margarine or other fat

Beat eggs. Add milk, seasonings, coarsely chopped almonds, and carrots. Melt fat in ring mold. Use it to grease mold thoroly, then pour remaining fat into the mixture. Fill mold. Set in a pan of hot water and bake at 325 degrees until firm, about 30 minutes.

Readers who'd like a collection of fine carrot recipes for use during this season of cheap and plentiful supplies of carrots, may have them without charge. All we ask is a stamped, self-addressed envelope to facilitate mailing. No postcard requests, please. Recipes include ways of serving carrots, both cooked and raw.

You'll like the flavor of margarine mixed this way: Along with the coloring which comes in the package, add 1 tablespoon lemon juice, 1 tablespoon water, 1 teaspoon sugar and a dash of salt.

Illinois asparagus is now supplementing supplies from California, altho asparagus still is expensive. This is a vegetable which should be cooked with care, as its green color is easily lost, and the stalks acquire a mushy consistency if overcooked. After thoroly washing asparagus, tie it in bundles and stand the bundles on end in a small amount of boiling salted water. The coarser stalks then cook in the water, and the tender heads in steam. Cook covered, and only until tender. If the stalks are tied in portion sized bundles, it is easy to transfer them to the dinner plates, clip the strings, and add whatever dressing is wanted: Seasoned melted margarine, warmed lemon mayonnaise, white sauce, or a genuine hollandaise sauce.

Avocadoes make an interesting cocktail when done up like fresh chilled shrimps, in a spicy tomato sauce. Cube the ripe avocado, pile it on lettuce in cocktail glasses, and add a cocktail sauce. A good one may be made by combining salad dressing and chili sauce, spicing with lemon juice, minced onion and Worcestershire sauce. Colorful and good.

Looking at Hollywood

By Hedda Hopper

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., April 15—R. K. O. has signed Maureen O'Hara for "The Fabulous Invalid." This play is taken from the Broadway hit by Moss Hart and George S. Kaufman. The screen play is being written by Stanley Roberts and Dewitt Bodeen. It's a drama of the American theater, told thru the career of a famous actress, and will be done in technicolor, with Stephen Ames as executive producer and Richard Berger as the producer. This looks like the answer to Maureen's prayer for a role that will give her a chance to do some real acting as well as look beautiful. . . . Metro's Irene leaves April 20 for her annual trip to New York. She will be away for about 10 days to look over new materials and designs. . . . Restrictions must have been lifted on Catalina as a location for pictures, because Otto Preminger plans to shoot some scenes for "Fallen Angel" there. The story stars Alice Faye, Linda Darnell, and Bruce Cabot. . . . John Stahl is off to Arizona to find locations for "Leave Her to Heaven." . . . Ward Bond, just back from Florida after two months on "They Were Expendable," is having trouble from his leg injury in that automobile accident. He's having X-rays to determine whether further surgery is required.

No Vacation Plans

As V-E day gets closer, it looks as tho Col. Frank Capra will be out of the army this summer. If so, the Capra-Briskin productions may be shooting by September. It wouldn't surprise me if their first production turned out to be "The Flying Yorkshireman," which Capra owns. It's been a pet idea of his for a long time. . . . James Cagney is back from the east, where he sold his farm at Martha's Vineyard. He will go to San Francisco in a couple of weeks to be guest of honor at the Press club dinner for the world security conference premiere of "Blood on the Sun." . . . Dinah Shore serenaded sailors on a warship at the pier at San Pedro yesterday at 7 a. m. As the sun came up Dinah sang "Oh, What a Beautiful Morning." The men on board had been two years overseas—on Guam, Saipan, and Iwo. . . . Ed Gardner is rounding up eight or nine people to take on his overseas jaunt to entertain the boys. . . . Vivian Blaine, who did four pictures in a row for Twentieth without time out, is now spending her vacation and long delayed honeymoon with Manny Frank entertaining on U. S. O. tours.

Producers' Stagger Plan

Pine and Thomas are losing no time on their trip to New Orleans to find locations for Johnny Weissmuller's "Swamp Fire." They're taking a couple of writers with them to work on other stories so that the two weeks on the train won't be wasted. . . . Little Joan Carroll has turned Betsy Ross on us. She and some of her playmates have made a silk flag from parachute silk with a blue "E" and a red "V" on it. It's going to fly from their school flagpole on that day we're waiting for. . . . John Darrow, who used to be a darn good actor himself, certainly seems to be able to pick young talent for the screen. June Allyson, Van Johnson, William Eythe, and Hurd Hatfield are some of them. Keep your eyes on Marjorie Davies, Victor Cutler, and Richard Shaw, his latest finds. . . . Tom Drake, young leading man whose career took a big jump in "This Man's Navy," is now studying singing with Harriet Lee at the request of the studio. . . . Rosemary De Camp, who's never had a chance to dress up on the screen, finally gets to when she plays Queen Margaret in "Don Juan." She has 18 changes, all gorgeous period costumes. But the catch is that each one weighs about 30 pounds, and shooting will probably start just as the summer heat wave hits us.

Anyway It Was Fun

Doc Bishop at Twentieth was telling about the time he chaperoned Carmen Miranda on an eastern trip. They spent five days in New York. Their first night at the theater Carmen sat beside a young sailor. When members of the audience saw Carmen and started begging for her autograph he turned to her and said, "Are you really Carmen Miranda?" She said, "Sure. Don't you want my autograph?" He said, "I don't want anything." One word led to another and it developed his girl had stood him up and he had a five day leave in New York. So Carmen said, "O. K. You just come with us. Wherever we go we'll take you." And they did even tho it was tough enough getting two theater tickets for the big successes and just plain murder to get three. Finally on the way to the theater one night Doc said to this boy [his name was Jack—that's all they knew], "Where do you come from?" "Texas." "Got any family?" "Sure." "Who are they?" "O, my dad owns the largest chain of grocery stores in the whole state." And Doc Bishop had been lugging him all over New York and paid the checks for five days—and continued paying. . . . Honey Boy Evans' fans needn't be afraid that Frank Sinatra is going to play their idol on the screen in the musical, "As the Clouds Roll By." He's not. Nothing against Frank, but no two people could be less alike. Honey Boy started as a breaker boy in a Welsh coal mine and went from there to a spot on Broadway.

Thru the Looking Glass

Did you ever notice that of the women who become more rather than less attractive as they grow older, the best looking ones are those who use too little rather than too much make-up, and who dress with the idea of what is appropriate to maturity rather than to youth?

It's a curious and pathetic thing that the woman who tries desperately to hang onto her youthful beauty usually defeats her purpose. It is ever so much better, as one rips off the years, to change one's concept of personal beauty. There is a certain type of youthful beauty—and it's fine for the young. There is another quite different type of beauty for the mature and for the elderly. They simply aren't the same.

The woman whose hair is white and who's said good-by to her first half century should use less rather than more rouge and powder than she ever did before. Even her lipstick should be softer than it was in her youth—and so should her nail polish. If she dyes her hair, its tint should be a soft one—keyed to the original shade, of course, but not so definite. A general change in styling one's self is necessary if one would grow older picturesquely. Not that one should abandon style; far from it. It's just a change in style, from the harsher outlines and colors of youth to the softer ones that are flattering and more gracious with age. It's a subtle change, but one that must be made if a woman wants to be considered as beautiful in her maturity as she was in her youth.

Styles and standards are not the same for the middle aged woman as they are for the lithe young thing. It's a wise woman who shifts her fashion gears as the years advance.

'Sudan' So Bad a Movie It's Almost Good

"SUDAN"

By Mae Tinée

"Sudan" is so bad it's almost good.

It reminded me of "The Sheik" as it might be done by an amateur theatrical group,—and Turhan Bey is no Rudolph Valentino. To me, he has about as much sex appeal as a cold potato, and Egyptian trappings certainly do not improve his looks. Andy Devine is the comic, and wears something that looks as tho it came out of the ladies' stylish stout department—size 54. He and Jon Hall are a couple of horse thieves in the ancient kingdom of Khemmis. Maria Montez is a queen, and a very dumb one, I might add. She's the only one who doesn't catch wise to the royal chamberlain, and as a result, she's captured and branded as a slave. All this involves much galloping thru the desert, with Miss Montez displaying her figger in colorful and close-fitting gowns. It's lucky the torso is good, because she has little else to offer, —she must have been saving up her histrionics for the Union station.

Fire Destroys 4 Tots' Beds; Others Sought

BY SALLY JOY BROWN

Perhaps some of our readers will be able to respond to this plea from a worried south side mother, who states her case as follows:

"Dear Miss Brown: I have never had to ask for assistance before, but the destruction of my children's beds, beddings, a buggy, and clothing by fire, and our inability to make replacements, has necessitated my writing to you. In the meantime, I must do the best I can with what we have. Because of exposure at the time of the disaster, my 7 year old son, who is crippled, contracted pneumonia and was hospitalized. Since his return home, he and his 5 year old brother have shared with me a single cot, which was salvaged from the flames. It is necessary that he have his own bed to assure his rest and return to health. My 16 month old child has had to sleep in a partially destroyed play pen, and a cardboard box has served as a crib for my baby, who is 4 months old. I can no longer bear to see my babies sleeping in these extremely unsafe makeshifts. A youth's bed, two cribs, a buggy, bedding, boys' clothing in sizes 2, 6, and 7; shoes, sizes 5, 10½, and 12, and clothing for the baby will be appreciated."

The name and address will be given upon request.

SENATORS, YANKS OPEN 1945 SEASON TODAY

COOPERS STAND PAT ON STRIKE FOR MORE PAY

Renew Threats to Quit Baseball

St. Louis, Mo., April 15 [Special]—The Cooper brothers, star battery of the World Champion St. Louis Cardinals, stood pat on their walkout today, declaring that the next move, if any, was up to Sam Breadon, Red Bird president.

Neither was in uniform as the Cardinals salvaged the final of their city series with the Brown, 2 to 1. Catcher Walker Cooper did not even show up at Sportsman's Park while Pitcher Morton was seen in street clothes under the grandstand. He would make no comment on the situation.

Breadon said they would not be penalized for their failure to turn out for today's game if they capitulated to the extent of leaving with the rest of the team tomorrow night for Chicago where the Cardinals will open the season Tuesday with the Cubs.

Walkouts Costs Walker Captaincy

The walkout, however, already has cost Walker some prestige and $500, it was learned unofficially. No matter what disposition is made of the unusual case, it is understood that the catcher will be deposed as captain of the team, an honor which carries with it $500 in additional pay.

The two previous Cardinal captains, Terry Moore and Jimmy Brown, are both in service. Cooper succeeded to the captaincy when Brown was inducted in midseason of 1943.

Salary trouble between the Coopers and Breadon developed after both had signed contracts for $12,000, the same they had received last year and which Mort also had been paid the preceding season. The signing was done, they say, when Breadon pointed out that, under salary ceiling regulations, their pay could not be boosted because they were the highest paid players on the squad.

Marion Signs for $13,500

A week ago, however, Shortstop Marty Marion, was signed by Breadon to a contract above the $12,000 salary ceiling. Breadon, at the time, explained to Marion that the raise was subject to approval by the internal revenue department. He then recalled the Coopers to his office, explained what he was doing for Marion and offered to raise their contracts to $13,500 each, subject to the same approval.

Both refused and thru their lawyer, Lee J. Havener, explained why. Since Breadon had the authority and discretion to grant raises, they pointed out, they believed they had the right to bargain for what they called a reasonable raise. In Mort's case particularly, the boys believed that the pitcher was entitled to more money, declaring that a reasonable raise last year would have been $1,500 to $13,500, and an additional $1,500 this season, making $15,000. At that point, matters reached an impasse, Breadon asserting he felt he had been fair. The Coopers state the situation now is in the hands of their lawyer. The lawyer has written Ford Frick, National league president, presenting the Coopers' side of the case.

No Rail Reservations Made

Walker Cooper's only statement today was that the players had talked no more with Breadon and did not know when they would again. He also said that as far as he knew Mort was planning to leave either tonight or tomorrow for Kansas City where he has intimated he may go into other business.

A check of railroad offices tonight, however, revealed that he had no reservation on any of the midnight or early morning Kansas City bound trains.

WILLIAM CORBIN, OLD TIME YALE ATHLETE, DIES

Hartford, Conn., April 15 (AP)—William H. [Pa] Corbin, 81, one time Yale football player, died yesterday in Hartford hospital where he had been a patient since being struck by an automobile early last month.

Corbin was captain and center of Yale's 1888 eleven which was undefeated in 13 games, rolling up 698 points while holding the opposition scoreless.

At Yale Corbin was ranked with such illustrious Eli stars as William W. [Pudge] Heffelfinger, Frank Hinckey, Tom Shevlin, Jim Hogan, and others of the pre-Ted Coy era. He was a familiar figure at practice sessions and games at old Yale field and in the bowl.

Your Mother and I

We were strangely silent on the way to the train—
Who knew when we'd be back together again?
My dad shook my hand as I started to leave
As he forced a smile which I didn't believe.
He didn't say much—he just smiled instead—
But how I remember the few words he said:
"We'll be waiting, son, after this good-by,
We're proud of you boy, your mother and I."
There's a lump in my throat that I can't explain,
When I hear those last words in my mem'ry again,
Those few words will keep me brave 'til I die—
"We're proud of you, Richard, your mother and I."

Our first prayer of thanks o'er the conquering Yanks
Will be for each gallant boy,
Then each man and his mate will no doubt celebrate
The return of some private joy.

Hundreds now living, will bow in thanksgiving
As soon as the tumult is stilled,
They can start right away, without further delay
On that new home they've long planned to build.

The girls, with a smile on, can then ask for nylon,
Cigarets will be free as the air,
The shops will be filled with the things that once thrilled
And whose lack caused no end of despair.

The things that I seek will seem rather meek,

Cochran Breaks World Record; Cuts Hoppe Lead

Welker Cochran yesterday set a new world record and sliced 54 points off Willie Hoppe's commanding lead in their marathon three cushion billiards title match. Cochran, the champion, whipped Hoppe, 60 to 22, in 20 innings last night at Bensinger's after having defeated the veteran in the afternoon, 60 to 47, in 41 innings. Hoppe, after 46 blocks of the transcontinental tour, leads, 2,486 to 2,372.

Cochran's feat in making 60 points in 20 innings is a record under the new system of using an optional cue ball. He ran 16 points in the final inning. In New York early in the match the Californian scored 60 points in 23 innings. Later, in Philadelphia, Hoppe matched this record.

Jeanne Wilson, 19 year old Northwestern university freshman, representing Chicago's Lake Shore club, broke the American record for the 100 yard breast stroke in the National A. A. U. Women's swimming meet yesterday afternoon in the Town club pool, Continental hotel. Miss Wilson, after setting a national A. A. U. meet record in the morning's trials, established an American mark of 1:15.1 in the finals as she defeated the defending champion, Patricia Sinclair of New York.

Jeanne's spectacular swimming thus shared the spotlight on the final day of the national races wtih the free style exhibition of Ann Curtis of San Francisco who successfully defended her 220 yard title. This was Miss Curtis' third free style triumph in the meet, a clean sweep for the first time in 13 years. Helene Madison was the last woman star to take all free style races in national A. A. U. competition.

Beats Brenda Again

Ann's triumph yesterday, as on Friday at 100 yards, was at the expense of Brenda Helser of Hollywood, Cal. It was a workmanlike performance altho her time of 2:31.5 was 2 3/10 seconds slower than her winning mark a year ago. At the end of 50 yards Miss Curtis, in lane five, led Brenda by a yard. She maintained the advantage at 100 yards, was in front 2 yards at the end of six laps, and at 200 yards she led by 3 yards.

Ann made all turns smoothly, swam a straighter course, and held her lead easily to the ultimate conclusion.

Record Stands Four Years

In the qualifying races yesterday, Miss Wilson, who last July won the CHICAGO TRIBUNE 100 yard free style championship for girls 17 and 18 years of age, set a mark of 1:16.5, one second faster than the National A. A. U. record established last year by Miss Sinclair. In the finals, she smashed the four year old American record of 1:15.3 made by Lorraine Fisher at Greenwich, Conn. Miss Fisher then competed for the Women's Swimming association of New York. She now swims for the Crystal Plunge, San Francisco.

From the start of the 100 yard breast stroke final, it was apparent the National A. A. U. mark was in danger. With the 1944 winner setting the pace for the first lap of 25 yards, and with Jane Kittleson of Forth Worth, Tex., taking the lead at 50 yards, Miss Wilson was forced to supreme effort.

Takes Lead at 75 Yards

Jeanne forged ahead by a fraction of a stroke at the last turn, an advantage she clung to sturdily while a near capacity crowd of home town folks cheered. Jeanne made her winning touch in center lane as Miss Sinclair and Miss Kittleson reached for the marble edge of the pool. The judges' decision gave second place to Miss Sinclair.

Clara Lamore of Providence, R. I., who won the 300 yard individual medley title Friday night, was fourth. Nancy Grubb of Minneapolis A. C., was fifth.

Zoe Ann Olsen, representing the Athens club, Oakland, Cal., won a second diving championship yesterday when she won the 3 meter contest with 130.55 points. Friday Miss Olsen won the low board title with equal facility.

Victoria Manalo, swiming unattached from San Francisco, was second in the high diving with 115.78 points. Third place, at 109.43 points, went to Gloria Woodin, a teammate

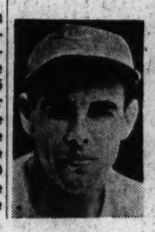
LOWREY JOINS CUBS; GAME WITH SOX CALLED OFF

BY EDWARD BURNS

Harry [Peanuts] Lowrey reported to the Cubs yesterday and promptly became a candidate for left field, tho he is not ready to take a part in the season opener against the world champion St. Louis Cardinals in Wrigley field tomorrow. After cold winds had blown away chances to play the final of the city series against the White Sox, the Cubs put on their wraps and participated in a two hour drill in which Lowrey joined them.



Harry Lowrey

Lowrey played 130 games for the Cubs in 1943, most of them in center field, tho he played 16 games at shortstop. Last year he was in the army but received a medical discharge early last winter and immediately wrote of his availability for Cub duty. He did not sign a contract till his arrival in Chicago and was not allowed to work out with the Los Angeles Angels, as other players who live in southern California were asked to do.

Three Bid for One Job

Lowrey is a wiry type, however, and his only need is more batting practice, according to Manager Charley Grimm. The plan, said the skipper, is to work him in left field, where he will be a rival of Eddie Sauer, who will start in left tomorrow, and Frank Secory, who was injured in Comiskey park last Thursday.

The Cubs today will open a thermometer watching vigil against the 70th National league opener in Chicago, but they will take their eyes off the mercury around noon for another workout, also a dress rehearsal. The new uniforms embody no dressmaking novelties, but ball players, like everybody else, enjoy dressing up in brand new raiment.

Wonder About Coopers

Barring accidents in the final preseason drill, Manager Grimm will spend today content in the knowledge he is all set on his opening day line-up. He is not so certain of the opposition, because of the strike of the Cooper brothers, Pitcher Mort and Catcher Walker, who were to have formed the champs' battery—and probably will, baseball rebellions being what they are.

While Grimm said he would have liked to have played the White Sox final under favorable conditions, he felt just as much had been accom-

Sox Take Refresher Course; Oppose Indians Tomorrow

BY IRVING VAUGHAN

The White Sox, who are going to walk bravely into the American league race tomorrow without fear of consequences will be treated to a slight refresher course this morning under the direction of James Dykes, the Comiskey park baseball professor.

Whether the slight going over will do much good is questionable, but the Sox did nothing yesterday because of the weather, so the boss figured 48 hours of utter leisure might be much too much for their physical well being.

Meanwhile, the boss himself is getting a bit out of condition, not for the want of physical exercise but because of mounting worries over what might happen to his boys when they begin challenging the seven other American league teams.

Dickshot in Left Field

Dykes will open tomorrow against the Indians with what he calls his regular lineup altho it is a little different than what passed for that during the last few days of training in Terre Haute. Guy Curtright was considered a certainty for left field, but John Dickshot will be there and batting third, at least until he indicates he can't carry the load. The Waukegan lad won the place because of consistent hitting in the few exhibition games played.

Bill Nagel continues to be the first baseman, his .307 batting average with the Brewers last season being the attraction, but the young man's fielding may precipitate a pitchers' rebellion even if he does help some with his bat. Joe Orengo may go there eventually, but Dykes would prefer to keep the latter as an assistant to Tony Cuccinello, the aged third baseman. It all depends on whether Dykes can wangle a first baseman out of some other club and whether the army deems Nagel suitable material.

Thornton Lee to Pitch

Thornton Lee, the 37 year old lefty, remains the choice to start the Sox off in the 154 game race and there is nothing wrong with the veteran even tho the Cubs did cut him to ribbons last Thursday in the only game of the city series. Bill Dietrich and Ed Lopat will, according to present arrangements, be in charge of the two other games in Cleveland, after which the Sox will return to play their own home opener, assisted by the champion Browns.

Because transportation accommodations are limited the Sox will start out tonight for Cleveland with a reduced squad. Some of those remaining at home probably will be turned over to minor league clubs within the next couple of days.

SEA SWALLOW SETS RECORD AT AGUA CALIENTE

AGUA CALIENTE, Mex., April 15 (AP)—S. C. Howard's Sea Swallow, 3 year old son of Seabiscuit, today won the one mile derby trial at the Hipodromo de Tijuana track, clipping three-fifths of a second off the mile record, formerly held by Igorete.

Sea Swallow, with Johnny Longden in the saddle, ran the distance in 1:36 3-5 while winning by a length and one half from Gallinatti and Clark's Wise Eagle. S. D. Young's Private Young won show money in the eight horse field.

FRICK LINES UP N. L. UMPIRES FOR TOMORROW

New York, April 15 (AP)—Umpire assignments for Tuesday's opening games in the National league as announced today by President Ford Frick were:

St. Louis at Chicago—John Reardon, Larry Goetz, and Lou Jorda.

Pittsburgh at Cincinnati—George Barr, John Sears, and John Conlan.

New York at Boston—George Magerkurth, Bill Stewart, Tom Dunn, and Walter Henline.

Philadelphia at Brooklyn—Ralph Pinelli, Lee Ballanfant, and Lynton Borgess.

Henline, purchased from the International league, is the only addition to the 1944 staff.

New York, April 15 (AP)—After a winter of uncertainty, during which many doubted that the game would continue, America's fourth war time baseball season will open tomorrow in Washington amid national mourning for Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Marking the start of the first season in 24 years without the guiding had of the late Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis, the New York Yankees and the Washington Senators clash in the nation's capital at 2 p. m. [Chicago war time].

A crowd of 30,000 is expected to watch the game in Griffith stadium. The game will be played as a memorial tribute to Roosevelt who, in pre-Pearl Harbor days, always tossed out the first ball as the country's No. 1 fan. The other 14 teams in the two major leagues will open Tuesday before an anticipated aggregate turnout of 180,000.

Truman Boosts Game

President Truman is not expected to attend the inaugural due to press of duties in the White House. The new chief executive is solidly behind the national pastime, however. Only eight days ago in Buffalo he asserted:

"The great American game of baseball is the most popular organized sport of our people, both on the homefront and on the battlefront. As a vital part of our American way of life, baseball is among the many things we are fighting for. As another season is about to open, I want to join our enthusiastic fans and say—play ball."

NATIONAL LEAGUE—St. Louis at Chicago [20,000], Pittsburgh at Cincinnati [29,000], Philadelphia at Brooklyn [25,000], New York at Boston [15,000].

AMERICAN LEAGUE—Detroit at St. Louis [7,500], Chicago at Cleveland [18,000], Boston at New York [35,000], Washington at Philadelphia [10,000].

Cards, Browns Favorites

The world champion St. Louis Cardinals in the National league and the pennant winning St. Louis Browns in the American league have been established as favorites to repeat, altho the drafting of key players may scramble the entire situation.

The Cardinals have lost Stan Musial, their best hitter last year as well as Outfielder Danny Litwhiler and Pitcher Fred Schmidt. But unless they also lose Catcher Walker Cooper, Pitcher Max Lanier and Outfielder Johnny Hopp, all three having been accepted for military duty, they appear on the way to join the New York Giants of 1921-'24, which is the only National league club to win four consecutive pennants.

The Cardinal infield, rated the best in either league, still is intact, while the pitching staff, headed by Mort Cooper, Ted Wilks, Harry Brecheen, Blix Donnelly, and Lanier is of pre-war caliber.

Pirates Well Fortified

The Pittsburgh Pirates, only team with last year's regular lineup intact, are expected to furnish the Cards with the sternest opposition. Frankie Frisch's second placers of last year have been strengthened by the acquisition of Southpaw Al Gerheauser from Philadelphia in exchange for Vince DiMaggio, and Catcher Bill Salkeld from the Pacific coast.

The Chicago Cubs, with Bill Nicholson as their big gun, pack plenty of punch. The return of Mickey Livingston and Paul Gillespie has bolstered the catching department but manager Charley Grimm is worried about his pitching.

The Giants, strengthened in their weakest department by the return of Lingle Van Mungo and the purchase of pitchers Ray Harrell, Loren Bain and Bill and Bill Emmerich, should round out the first division.

Reds Lose Stars

The Cincinnati Reds, weakened by the loss of Catcher Ray Mueller, Pitchers Clyde Shoun, Harry Gumbert, and Jim Konstanty, and Shortstop Eddie Miller for part of the season, may wind up in the second division for the first time under Bill McKechnie's eight-year reign.

The Boston Braves and Phillies, presenting revamped teams, might be interesting but are unlikely to break into the first division. The Dodgers, with an assortment of veterans and teen-age youngsters, will have a tough time escaping the cellar, where they've finished only once, back in 1905.

In the American league, the Browns have almost the same club as last year. Gone are Outfielder Al Zarilla and Pitcher Denny Galehouse.

CARDINALS BEAT BROWNS, 2-1, IN FINAL OF SERIES

National League Pitchers Yield Only Three Hits

St. Louis, Mo., April 15 (AP)—The world champion St. Louis Cardinals salvaged the final game of their city series with the American league champion St. Louis Browns today, 2 to 1, in a pitchers' battle.

Gutteridge scored the Browns' only run in the first inning after he had singled and advanced on a sacrifice by Gray. The Cardinals' winning runs were driven in by Red Schoendienst in the eighth while Tex Shirley was pitching. Jack Kramer, Nelson Potter, and Shirley divided the Browns' pitching chores in three inning stints.

The Browns won the series, four games to two.

Brooklyn, N. Y., April 15 (AP)—In what was the final tuneup of the training season for both teams, the Yankees walked off with a 7 to 5 victory over the Dodgers today before a paid attendance of 14,518.

The Yankees made only four hits but scored six runs in the seventh inning when Tom Seats who had just relieved Hal Gregg, walked five batters in a row. The passes and a double by Oscar Grimes put the Yankees in front. The Dodgers bunched three of their five hits off Elmer Singleton in the sixth, and scored four runs to break a 1 to 1 deadlock.

Takes Bill at His Word

Charles did not worry too much at having been denied the opportunity to see his slugger, Bill Nicholson, in competitive action for the first time in 1945. Bill has told Charley he is ready and that is all the assurance he wants, the skipper said. Grimm also had reports of the way Bill was smacking the ball while working out with the Phillies in Wilmington, Del., if he needed any comfort.

Missing the drill yesterday was Bob Chipman, lefty, who is suffering from an infected toe. Bob, who has been slated to work in the opening series in Pittsburgh this weekend, was to have been in uniform yesterday but was held in a hospital to give the sore digit further chance to get well.

Pitcher Claude Passeau continued optimistic about the improvement in his ailing elbow but the cold weather threw a new scare into Eddie Hanyzewski, who is waiting for a sizzling afternoon to get his sore arm back in shape.

PUBLIC LEAGUE GYMNASTS WILL COMPETE TODAY

The 22d annual Chicago Public High School league gymnastic meet, which was postponed from Saturday, will be held this afternoon in the University of Chicago's Bartlett gymnasium.

VIKINGS WIN, 4-1; 3 OTHER SOCCER MATCHES TIED

Close games and bad weather yesterday marked the opening of the National Soccer league season. Three major division games ended in ties. The only victory was credited to the Vikings who defeated Chicago Sports club, 4 to 1.

The Rangers gained a moral victory when they held the Swedish-Americans, state champions, to a one goal deadlock. The Hansa-Hakoah-Centers match, billed as the feature attraction, was scoreless, and Sparta tied the Schwabens, 2 to 2.

Two Hokoahs Absent.

The Hakoahs were handicapped by the absence of their two Detroit stars, Manfred Lehman and Alfred Strauss. Manny Werner, up from the reserves, and Max Grunner filled in. The Hansas used a newcomer from the east, Fritz Runter, who played only 15 minutes.

The scoreless tie was a furious battle between the traditional rivals. The referee was kept busy thruout the game separating would-be fist fighters and players of both teams were frequently forced to the sidelines for first aid.

Both teams had numerous scoring chances during the first half, but Werner Fekker and Bill Stein, in the nets, warded off all attempts at the goal. The Hakoahs developed the best passing game but could not dent Fekker's defenses. Maxie Pearlman performed well downfield but his boots for the goal always missed.

Hansa Attack Fails.

The Hansas developed the best scoring opportunities of the game during the last two minutes of play, but Fred Peglow's shots at the goal were wild.

Headlining next week's schedule is the third round game in the National Open cup series between the Swedes and the Slovaks. The winner will meet the Vikings in the Chicago district finals. Also on next Sunday's card is the long delayed first round National Amateur cup game between the Italians and Hakoahs.

Chicago Skaters Defeat New York Team, 16 to 14

The Chicago roller derby team won its fourth straight victory of the current series by defeating New York, 16 to 14, last night in the Coliseum before 7,100. Jack Wilson of New York scored five points. Chicago increased its point lead, and now is ahead, 286 to 278, over New York.

Bomar, Flesch Lose Ground in Title Match

Detroit, Mich., April 15 [Special]—Walter Reppenhagen and Bill Kenet of Detroit are within six points of taking the national match doubles championship away from Bill Flesch and Buddy Bomar of Chicago. The Detroiters, finishing strongly in the last three frames of every game, won the second and third blocks today at Olympic Recreation to lead the Chicagoans in points, 18.5 to 5.5.

Kenet and Reppenhagen need to win six points when the second half of the 42 game match is resumed in Chicago this week-end to become title holders.

REMIAS TAKES LEAD

Remias Recreation, captained by Anne Remias, last night captured the lead in the team event of Jack Samuelson's 13th annual Century of Progress Women's Handicap Bowling tournament by turning in a 2,989 total on games of 1,092, 988, and 904, including handicap. The event is in progress in Bowling Lanes, 5211 Broadway.

Bowling on the same squad, the Doodits, a make-up team, took second position with 2,888, relegating the Dauphin Park Dairy quintet, which took the lead Saturday night, to third place.

The singles lead also changed hands as Norma Roos rolled 659 with scores of 224, 202, and 233. Nina van Camp remained in second place with her 652, altho her total was tied by Myrtle Raman.

LARRY HANNA TAKES PARKS' ARCHERY TITLE

Larry Hanna of Tuley park scored 728 points yesterday to win the Chicago park district archers' indoor championship in a meet which was held in Tuley park. All of the contestants shot 96 arrows from a distance of 20 yards.

Marvin Schmidt of Lincoln park was second with 718, and R. T. Anderson of Riis park placed third with 712.

In the women's division, Mrs. Edith Radtke of Tuley park and Mrs. Betty Schmidt of Lincoln park tied for first with 652 points. Mrs. Radtke was awarded first place because she had 96 hits and 26 goals, while Mrs. Schmidt had 96 hits and 23 goals. Jean Horney of Columbus park finished in third place with 650 points.

DEBATE DATE FOR NELSON VS. SNEAD CHARITY MATCH

New York, April 15 (AP)—Byron Nelson and Sam Snead will play their 72-hole charity golf match either May 26-27 or June 2-3, Freddie Corcoran, tournament manager of the Professional Golfers' association, said today.

The first 36 holes probably will be played on a New York course and the second 36 on the succeeding day on a New Jersey course. Neither of the sites has yet been selected, Corcoran said.

It previously had been planned to hold the match on Decoration day.

SENATORS AND YANKS TO OPEN SEASON TODAY

house, but two newscomers, Babe Martin, a .350 hitter in the American association and one-armed Pete Gray, will provide punch.

The chief obstacle facing the Browns in their quest for a second straight flag appears to be the Detroit Tigers. Despite the loss of Dick Wakefield and Pinky Higgins, the Tigers will prove tough mainly because they still have Hal Newhouser and Paul [Dizzy] Trout, who, in 1944 won 56 games between them.

The Yankees should again be in the running but will be badly crippled should the recently reclassified Johnny Lindell, Nick Etten, and Oscar Grimes be called.

Little Hope for White Sox.

The Boston Red Sox have come up with fine replacements in Pitcher Rex Cecil and Infielders Ben Steiner and Jack Tobin for Tex Hughson, Bobby Doerr, and Jim Tabor. With a little more pitching they would prove troublesome.

The Philadelphia Athletics, Cleveland Indians, and Chicago White Sox probably will battle to lead the second division. The Indians have lost Third Baseman Ken Keltner and probably Jeff Heath while the Sox are minus Gordon Maltzberger, relief pitching star, and may soon lose Wally Moses.

The Senators, staggering under the heavy blow dealt by the loss of Stan Spence, their top hitter, and Shortstop Johnny Sullivan, will not surprise any one if they were to repeat their last place finish of 1944.

ARMY DENIES MAJOR'S A RED; HERE'S RECORD

A Glance at the Past of Edward Newhouse

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., April 15—New attention was centered today on communism in the army when the affiliations of Maj. Edward Newhouse, who occupies a confidential post on the staff of Gen. Arnold, head of the army air forces, were reviewed in the light of an army denial that Newhouse is a Communist.

The major was included among 10 army officers whose Communist connections were published by THE TRIBUNE March 1 after Maj. Gen. Clayton Bissell, head of the army's intelligence corps, had told a house military affairs subcommittee the previous day that he knew of no Communist who had received a commission. The names of the 10 were turned over to a member of the subcommittee.

On Daily Worker Staff

Following the publication of the Tribune story, C. J. McGregor, 406 E. Westminster av., Lake Forest, Ill., wrote to Washington inquiring about the status of Newhouse.

McGregor received a reply signed by Col. Fred M. Dean of the army air forces headquarters, to whom his letter had been referred. In the reply Col. Dean said that "it has been determined that Maj. Newhouse has never been a member of the Communist party."

An investigation by THE TRIBUNE disclosed that Maj. Newhouse was a member of the staff of the Daily Worker, official Communist organ, before he entered military service. Staff workers themselves have asserted that all employes of the Daily Worker must be members of the Communist party. Newhouse also was a contributor to the New Masses, official Communist magazine.

In the Daily Worker of Feb. 13, 1937, a Newhouse story contained this phrase: "When Earl Browder told the writers' congress that our party did not want to take good writers and make bad strike leaders of them. . . ."

Wrote a "Party Novel"

Newhouse is the author of a novel about a group of Communist farmers entitled "This Is Your Day." Edwin Feaver, Daily Worker book reviewer, described it as a "party novel." Browder, Communist leader, praised the novel in a letter to the Daily Worker, asserting it was "the first novel that I have read which gives the authentic touch of the Communist movement as one part of the younger generation."

Together with Browder, Newhouse in 1935 signed the "call for a congress of revolutionary writers" which was addressed to "those who have clearly indicated their sympathy to the revolutionary cause; who do not need to be convinced of the decay of capitalism and the inevitability of revolution."

Communists Boasts Recalled

The house subcommittee's investigation of communism in the army was prompted by the publication of a war department directive dated Dec. 30, 1944, removing previous bans on the commissioning of Communists.

An army intelligence officer has estimated the number of commissioned Communists as "at least 500." The Communist Political association, successor to the Communist party, has boasted that it has more than 10,000 members in the military forces.

OCD TO LINGER EVEN AFTER WAR IN EUROPE ENDS

Hired and borrowed hands of the Chicago office of civilian defense, which was established to protect the city against enemy bombings, will keep their jobs after the war in Europe is over, Ralph H. Burke, area deputy coördinator, said yesterday.

"We must keep the organization alive just in case," he said.

The OCD, he said, spends $10,000 a month, which includes salaries of 20 full time staff employes, but not of 20 others borrowed from the police department and other city and park district pay rolls.

OCD expenditures have been curtailed by the city council, which has allowed it $150,000 for this year, compared with $250,000 in 1944. The agency's publication, Alert, which used to appear weekly and monthly and was given to anybody who wanted a copy, is now printed once a month and given only to block captains.

Paid and voluntary workers now devote themselves principally to the promotion of waste paper and clothing collection drives, war loans, and the erection of memorial plaques in neighborhood war veteran centers. A nucleus of men trained to operate emergency control centers has been kept on duty.

JOHN J. LYNCH, ONETIME KING GAMBLER, DIES

Chicagoan Once Had 10 Million Fortune

BY JAMES DOHERTY

John J. Lynch, prominent in Chicago gambling for half a century, died yesterday in Miami, Fla., where he maintained a winter home. He was 70 years old. He was first a lieutenant and then a partner of Mont Tennes, gambling king, and later a partner of M. L. Annenberg in the ownership of the General News bureau which supplied racing information to horse race gamblers all over the continent.

John J. Lynch

At the peak of his career Lynch was worth $10,000,000, in the opinion of his intimates. Probably his cash is almost gone now, they said, for he is known to have lost millions betting on horses and to have given away several fortunes. He never turned down a request for a loan or a "stake," friends declared. His gifts to charity were said to have been numerous.

Was Son of Constable

Lynch was born at Monroe and Wells sts., the son of a Chicago constable. He grew up in the neighborhood of Monroe and Halsted sts., in what was formerly the 18th ward, and is now the 27th. There he was closely identified with such well known political figures of other days as John Brennan, John Broderick, John Rogers and Homer Galpin. Later he was to spend much time with Ald. Michael (Hinky Dink) Kenna, and to share a race track box with Patrick A. Nash, who became head of his party organization.

Tennes quit the Chicago gambling field in the late '20s, selling his interests to Lynch. In 1935 Lynch made a final settlement with Annenberg, walking out of the General News bureau with $1,000,000 in cash. For the next 10 years he was to be on the other side of the gambling industry—as a player who took tips from anybody and everybody, most of the tips being bad.

Paid Kidnapers $50,000

He was a regular on Randolph st. for lunch when in Chicago and seldom missed an afternoon at the race tracks. In the winter he went to Florida; each spring saw him at Hot Springs, Ark., or some other spa, and late in the summer he attended the races and the sales at Saratoga.

Back in 1931 he was kidnaped and paid $50,000 ransom. He was said to have promised to pay his captors $200,000 more, but such payment wasn't necessary because, it was revealed later, the men who "snatched" him were caught and sent to prison for the kidnaping of James Hackett, Blue Island gambler.

Survived Only by Niece

Lynch's wife, Anne, died two years ago. They had no children. His only known surviving relative is a niece, Marjory Lynch, 1401 Elmdale av., the daughter of his brother. He had a summer home at Lake Geneva, Wis., and an apartment at 1120 Lake Shore dr.

The body will be brought here for burial in All Saints' cemetery.

AUSTIN STUDENT IS ACCIDENTALLY SLAIN BY FRIEND

William Campbell, 15, of 1111 N. Mason av., a sophomore at Austin High school, died yesterday in West Suburban hospital of a bullet wound accidentally inflicted by a friend, Paul Cannon Jr., 15, of 915 N. Mayfield av., in the latter's home.

Cannon, a member of the R. O. T. C. at St. Mel's High school, was unloading a .38 caliber revolver preparatory to cleaning it, while Campbell sat on a sofa nearby, reading a magazine. In some manner, the weapon was discharged, striking Campbell in the abdomen.

Cannon's father is a photographer for the Associated Press. Campbell's father works in a war plant.

FIND UNSTAMPED BEEF IN AUTO OF EVANSTON MAN

After arresting Charles Marback, owner of a butcher shop at 1901 Church st., Evanston, on a charge of tipsy driving Saturday afternoon, Sgt. Henry Engstrom of the Evanston police found two quarters of beef which bore no government stamp in the rear of Marback's car.

After booking Marback, Sgt. Engstrom accompanied him to his shop where, Engstrom said, he found a quantity of unstamped beef. Upon returning to the shop later, however, Engstrom reported, he found all the beef had been stamped.

MISSOURI BASIN FOUND IN DANGER OF SUPER-STATE

Foe of MVA Bill Says It Has No Benefits

BY ARTHUR EVANS

Nine states in the Missouri valley are becoming aroused against a proposal to establish a Missouri valley authority, similar to the Tennessee valley authority. Lachlan Macleay of St. Louis, Mo., president of the Mississippi Valley association, said yesterday in Chicago. He was here en route to Washington, D. C., where he will appear at hearings on the Murray MVA bill which start today before a subgroup of the senate commerce committee.

Lachlan Macleay.

"I have toured the states in the Missouri basin," said Macleay, "and have found them awakening to the threat of a puppet super-government in the Missouri valley. A few days ago a meeting of men from the valley states held in Omaha denounced the measure as an adventure in state socialism and an effort to set up a regional superstate in control of three men.

Other Plans Developed

"The Murray bill proposes to substitute a Missouri valley authority for the army engineers, the reclamation bureau, and other federal agencies which already have developed valley-wide plans approved by congress. Under the Murray measure there wouldn't be a pasture brook in the whole basin that wouldn't be under control of the authority. No owner of land adjacent to running water could make any move affecting that water without approval of the super-state.

"The authority would have the right of eminent domain, the authority to condemn and take over on payment of assessed costs any land, dam, plant, or other property, if in its judgment this was necessary to its purposes."

The important fact for the Missouri valley people, Macleay declared, is that every legitimate benefit promised by the MVA is assured in legislation already passed.

Five Objectives Covered

"Flood protection, irrigation, soil conservation, and navigation are vital problems of the valley," he said. "Federal power comes after these, and only where it can be developed properly and economically. All five of these objectives are now assured in the flood control bill signed by President Roosevelt last December and in the rivers and harbors bill signed last month. Congress in these bills has already authorized more than 400 million dollars to start this program for navigation, flood control, irrigation, soil conservation, and power development.

"In this legislation, however, there are no provisions for government competition with private enterprise, no provisions to usurp state or local rights, no provisions for social experiments, and no provision for autonomous rule and a regimented economy. These are matters contemplated in the pending bill for a MVA. Its proponents have made it plain that creation of a MVA is a first step toward socialization of the waters of the nation.

Responsible to No One

"Seven such authorities have been suggested. The regional authority plan would set up over the nation super-federal corporations with such broad powers that in most matters they would be responsible to no one but themselves. Their powers would supersede the rights of states and local communities, and in some instances evade the powers of congress.

"All the power the Mississippi Valley association can muster between the Rockies and the Appalachians will be thrown against this most dangerous proposal."

NEWS OF FINANCE AND COMMERCE

DROP SEAWAY PLAN, EASTERN BUSINESS ASKS

'Economic Fallacy, Fails in All Points'

Abandonment of the St. Lawrence seaway plan, pending before the house committee on rivers and harbors, as an economic fallacy was advocated yesterday by the Commerce and Industry Association of New York.

"Having failed of justification on every point on which support has been advanced, the project should be permanently abandoned," said a brief prepared by G. E. Mace, manager of the association's transportation bureau. "After approximately half a century of studies, estimates, and discussion it warrants no further expenditure of time, money, or consideration.

No Authoritative Estimates

"No authoritative or accurate information is available as to what the actual cost of the project, when completed, would be.

"Such estimates as have been made are all open to criticism as to their accuracy. They were all made prior to the present war, and there is no knowledge of the extent to which economic conditions which will exist during the post-war period will disturb cost estimates made during the pre-war period.

"The simple fact is that nobody today knows what the project would cost and therefore what would be the share to be borne by the United States. Until that information is obtained and disclosed the project cannot be approved as a prudent investment on the part of this government."

Vast Expenditures Outlined

The association said no convincing showing had been made that rail transportation costs between the west and the seaboard would be reduced materially were the St. Lawrence seaway in operation with a channel depth of 27 feet.

Vast expenditures would be necessary, not only to provide the channel from the open sea to Duluth, Minn., and other lake ports, but to maintain the channel depth and width against the natural filling by silt and soil erosion, it said. Further substantial expenditures would be required to install and maintain the 21 locks project.

"The St. Lawrence river is open for navigation about seven months of the year," the association cautioned. "This reduces the practical annual period of navigation to approximately 180 days. With a 45 day plus turn-around period, or round trip period, it is obvious that a vessel would be able to make only three round trips per year.

Excessive Costs Expected

"The charges for insurance, both on the vessel and on the cargo, would be in excess of similar charges on the same vessel and cargo if its operation were confined to the high seas." It said other operating costs would be excessive for salt water ships on a combined salt and fresh water route.

The project also raises some disturbing international problems, the statement said.

"Lake Michigan lies wholly within the United States, and accordingly the United States has exclusive control over it," the association explained. "The proposed agreement contains a provision for the maintenance of certain water levels in the Great Lakes system and the St. Lawrence river. The net result is to give to Great Britain or Canada, as the case may be, a measure of control over the waters of Lake Michigan which lie wholly within and are the property of the United States.

Chicago Subject to Britain?

"The fundamental right of the United States to withdraw from Lake Michigan, its own property, any amount of water that might be considered necessary or desirable for the future welfare of Chicago or the Mississippi valley would be surrendered to the extent of making it conditional upon the consent of Great Britain or Canada, contrary to common sense.

"Nowhere in the treaty or agreement does Great Britain or Canada give to the United States compensating jurisdiction over any portion of the waters of the St. Lawrence river.

"In the event of a war in which either the United States or Great Britain is a combatant and the other nation is neutral, serious international questions would arise as to the right of United States vessels or United States cargo to use the St. Lawrence seaway."

Big War Time Pay Holds Cab Driver on Job

Altho Chicago taxicab companies have no long waiting lists of applicants for drivers' jobs as were reported in New York, they have no difficulty in obtaining "cabbies" because of the comparatively high war time wages, spokesmen said yesterday. The biggest problem of Chicago operators is obtaining mechanics to keep the cabs rolling.

Cab drivers' wages in Chicago average about $10 a day, including tips, compared with between $40 and $60 a week in New York, a spokesman said. The lowest in average wages of the drivers in the depression years was about $20 a week.

Fewer Cabs Boost Pay

"Taxicab driving is an attractive job with earnings good as the result of increased riding and the fact that not as many cabs are in operation as before the war, which causes a larger demand," said Benjamin Samuels, vice president of Yellow Cab company.

He explained that the taxicab companies were operating under war man power commission employment ceilings, which cut them to 10 per cent below the total employed in March, 1944. His company was below that percentage most of the time already because of the WMC campaign to get workers into war plants, he said.

M. M. Sokoli, president of Checker Taxi company, said that because of the WMC ceilings, the only drivers his company was rehiring were returning war veterans. Checker has no waiting list of prospective drivers.

Maintenance Important

Because of an intensive program of reconditioning and rebuilding equipment, the cab situation in Chicago is much improved over six months ago, Samuels explained. He said this program insured that most present cabs would be able to operate for another year.

He explained that the war production board was of vast help in releasing replacement parts to the cab companies on a more liberal basis.

"With the motors, transmissions, and rear ends of the cabs kept in working order, we will be able to get along, for the bodies have been holding up well," Samuels said. "The cabs, of course, have not kept up their appearance, but the customer is interested in getting some place, not in how the cab looks."

He said if the war in Europe ends within the next month or so, he believes the WPB will permit the manufacture within the next year of 15,000 to 25,000 new taxicabs.

TWA to Start Washington to Pacific Flights May 1

New York, April 15 (AP)—Transcontinental and Western Air will begin a new transcontinental stratoliner flight May 1 from San Francisco to Washington by way of Chicago, E. O. Cooke, traffic vice president of the airline, announced today. Planes will leave San Francisco at 7 p. m., and arrive in Washington at 2:40 p. m. the next day. Leaving Washington at 8 p. m., they will arrive in Chicago at 11:20 p. m., Los Angeles at 8:45 a. m., and San Francisco at 10:50 a. m.

Life Writers Liberalize Air Travel Policy

Life insurance companies have resumed a trend toward liberalization in aviation underwriting, halted at the beginning of the war, the Institute of Life Insurance said yesterday. Since Jan. 1, many companies have adopted rates and rules more liberal than those in 1940, the institute reported.

Both airplane passengers and crew members can obtain life insurance protection on the most liberal basis of any time in the history of aviation, an analysis of the practices of companies doing three-fourths of the country's life insurance business showed.

Reduce Pre-War Rates.

"The liberalization trend had proceeded with little interruption up to the start of the war, with the companies granting protection more freely as air safety increased," the institute said. "The war caused a temporary tightening up, but since the first of the year a number of companies have adopted rates and rules more liberal than those applying in pre-war 1940. Many more are considering similar revisions."

Studies of the relationship of life insurance and aviation have been expanded with a view to post-war increases in flying thru creation of a joint aviation committee of the American Life convention and the Life Insurance Association of America. The committee was formed to handle all relations of life insurance with aviation other than statistical.

Liberalization Increases.

"Life insurance management recognizes the importance of life insurance to the development of aviation," Holgar J. Johnson, president of the institute, said. "The life insurance companies, therefore, have always endeavored to grant both those operating aircraft and those flying as passengers the maximum protection and lowest cost possible within the realm of sound underwriting.

"The result has been a record of consistent liberalization. The liberalization of the insuring of this new risk has advanced as increasing safety surrounding that risk has made it possible. Further liberalizations in aviation underwriting will be extended as rapidly as experience in aviation justifies."

Newspaper Advertising for War Big in January

New York, April 15 (AP)—United States daily and Sunday newspapers carried $2,243,632 of war assistance advertising in January, 1945, the bureau of advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers association reported today. It covered 31 different projects, the bureau said, with war bonds in first place, military recruiting second, war industry recruiting third, and fat and grease salvage fourth.

NORTH AMERICAN CO.

What is the status of plans to reorganize North American company under the "death sentence" provisions of the utility holding company act?—B. R.

The company's plan to divide its properties into four regional groups, proposed in 1943, is pending before the securities and exchange commission. Earlier the commission had directed North American to dispose of virtually all its properties other than the system of the Union Electric Company of Missouri.

Under the company's proposals, four regional corporations would be formed. Each would acquire the common stock of one of the four principal operating subsidiaries of the present system—Union Electric, Cleveland Electric Illuminating, Wisconsin Electric Power, and Washington [D. C.] Railway and Electric. A liquidating company would also be formed to take over certain other North American assets. Its capital stock would be owned by the four regional organizations. North American's Pacific Gas and Electric holdings would be divided between the Wisconsin and Washington regional companies.

Before these steps are taken, North American common stockholders would have the privilege of obtaining their proportionate share of the underlying subsidiary stocks on surrender of their stock and payment of the proportionate share of the cash necessary to retire the parent company's indebtedness and preferred stock. The regional companies would later assume the remaining North American debt and would issue their preferred and common stocks to the holders of the remaining stock of North American.

The SEC's attitude toward the plan is unknown. The company since Dec. 1, 1939, has distributed to its common stockholders securities with a recent market value of 53 million dollars, plus $6,349,000 cash paid in lieu of fractional shares.

A DETROIT SKYSCRAPER FOR SALE

A magnificent 35 story edifice of American architecture, accentuated by a high receding tower overlooking Detroit's skyline. Situated on one of the most prominent corners in the city. The ground floor is a strategic shopping center. Leases from this floor yield an income that exceeds the total real estate taxes. One short block to the heart of Detroit's retail shopping district. The occupancy is 100%. Erected in 1929 at a cost of $3,500,000. The owners offer for sale today at $1,750,000. Upwards of $500,000 cash [or Chicago hotel property in trade] to handle.
